Nazis Swarm on London From All Directions; City Shakes Under Roar of Bombs and Cannon

Death and Ruin Dropped From Storm Clouds

Thickening Weather Forces Raiders To Split Up Attack.

By The United Press.
LONDON, Sept. 17.—(Tuesday)—Swarming German bombers early today subjected London to its fiercest nighttime attack of the 10-day-old aerial siege, heaping destruction upon the heart of the already battered metropolis amid a hellish din of bursting bombs and shells.

The Nazis pressed an attack from 8:10 p. m. last night until 2:40 a. m. today, and then surprised weary, sleepy Londoners by departing long before their usual time.

Firemen Killed.
The all-clear signal was followed, however, by another alarm at 3:50 a. m., just as thousands of persons had begun what they had hoped would be a few hours quiet sleep.

This alarm lasted until 5:22 a. m., about the customary time at which Nazi airmen have concluded the night-long raids on London for more than a week.

There were a number of casualties—some of them fatal. The most spectacular deaths undoubtedly were those of several auxiliary firemen who were flung by a bomb explosion from the top of a tall extension ladder while they were fighting a fire on the upper floors of a building.

Four Heavy Explosions.
After the 3:50 a. m. alarm, four heavy bomb explosions were heard in central London and a fierce burst of antiaircraft fire. Then it was quiet until the 5:22 all-clear came.

(Thickening weather on which Britons long have counted as an autumn ally forced the raiders to break off their first attack, the Associated Press reported.)

High-explosive and incendiary bombs by the hundreds smashed on all sides, into central shopping districts and the business section, and buildings shook with the rolling thunder of the most savage antiaircraft fire heard since the launching of Adolf Hitler's "total war" on London.

Avenge 185-Plane Loss.
The Nazi raiders swept mercilessly low in their efforts to escape the withering fire of the "archies," including the biggest guns yet used in London's defense, as they returned to the battlefield of Sunday's huge air battles.

As though bent on vengeance for their loss of 185 planes Sunday, according to British official

First Group of Ex-Guardsmen Will Arrive at Fort Thursday

More Than 3,000 Georgians Inducted Into U. S. Army for Year's Training; Departure Schedules Are Released.

An army of more than 3,000 Georgians, who until their automatic induction yesterday into regular armed forces of the nation were part of the 30th Division, National Guard, move on Fort Jackson, S. C., this week and next for a year's intensive training.

First contingent, division headquarters officers, is due to reach the fort Thursday, the 19th. By highway and rail other units will move from Albany, Atlanta, Bainbridge, Barnesville, Brunswick, Cordele, Cornelia, Dublin, Griffin, Hawkinsville, Jackson, Macon, Savannah, Springfield, Thomasville, Waycross, Waynesboro and Valdosta until September 25, when concentration at the post will be completed.

Departure schedules for units of the division in Georgia were released yesterday by Fourth Corps Area headquarters as follows:

Albany: Company H, 121st Infantry, 128 men, entrains at 12:35 p. m. September 22.

Atlanta: Headquarters, Third Battalion and Company H 105th

Reporter Sees Political Blocs Guest Hurdled Gird for Battle By Bomb Shock Over Speaker

Windows Shattered, Writer Thinks He Will Go to Cellar.

(Editor's Note: Drew Middleton has been under fire, off and on, ever since the European war began, as a war correspondent of the Associated Press with the British expeditionary force in Belgium and France and elsewhere. He tells here of what it was like when a bomb landed in London last night just outside an apartment he was visiting.)

By DREW MIDDLETON.
LONDON, Sept. 16.—(R)—A heavy German bomb, at least a 500-pounder, landed tonight 150 feet from an apartment where I am visiting.

The explosion was so heavy that it broke every pane of glass in the block and one of the guests in this apartment was thrown across the room by the concussion. We went out to see if a shelter in the adjoining square had been hit. It had escaped, narrowly. The bomb blasted out a 35-foot crater in the small park in the center of the square.

We did not stay out of doors long, but when we returned we found that everyone in the apartment house had gone to the basement shelter.

People were crowded together, dressed in everything from evening dress to nightgowns. Antiaircraft shell splinters were falling all around the building.

This is telephoned from the apartment, but I think I'll go down to the basement if this keeps on.

5-Week-Old Fire Alarm Finally Reaches Station

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 16.—(R)—A firm alarm pulled during the hurricane here August 11 just reached the indicators in fire station today and brought out four companies.

City electricians who were working on the box said it had been out of commission and without current since the big blow. "As soon as we made the line hot the box began to click out the old alarm," one electrician explained.

Bankhead Paid Final Tribute By U. S. Capital

Roosevelt, His Face Drawn and Sad, Sits in Front of Casket.

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The nation's capital paused today to pay final tribute to the late House Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, at state funeral services in the chamber where he had presided for the past four years as head of the government's legislative branch.

Headed by President Roosevelt, leaders of the three government branches filed silently into the flower-banked chamber a few minutes after Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn of Texas had been chosen to succeed Bankhead, who died early Sunday.

Mr. Roosevelt was the last to arrive. Preceding him were members of the cabinet and the congress. The Supreme Court was represented by Justice James C. McReynolds.

F. D. R.'s Face Drawn.

His face drawn and sad, Mr. Roosevelt sat directly in front of the flower-mantled casket that bore the body of the man who, throughout the New Deal, had fought to uphold his President's policies. Near-by, attired in deep mourning, sat members of Bankhead's immediate family—Mrs. Bankhead, their daughters—Stage Actress Tallulah and Mrs. Eugenia Bankhead-Hoyt—and his brother, Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama.

The house, which as recently as Saturday had resounded with historic debate on vital affairs of state, now was hushed.

After the opening prayer was intoned by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the house, Rayburn mounted to the rostrum where Bankhead had presided as master of the gavel since 1936.

His voice shaking with emotion, Rayburn said Bankhead's "friendship was an enriching treasure."

The Rev. Montgomery delivered a eulogy of the late speaker and then the service ended with a hymn and benediction.

Special Funeral Train.

A special funeral train, carrying members of the family, a 60-man house delegation and 23 senators, was scheduled to arrive at 11 a. m. tomorrow at Bankhead's native Jasper, Ala., where final rites will be conducted at the Methodist church at 2:30 p. m. Bankhead's body will be buried beside those of his parents.

(Georgia congressmen to attend are Senator George and Representatives Vinson and Cox, the Associated Press said.)

Bankhead's daughter, Tallulah, did not go to Jasper. True to the tradition of the stage, she left here after the state services for Hershey, Pa., to fulfill an engagement there.

Following the cortege to Jasper in another train were Mr. Roosevelt, members of his cabinet and other high administration officials. Henry A. Wallace, the President's third-term running mate, interrupted his campaign tour in the middle west and will join the Roosevelt party at Jasper. After the state services, the house adjourned until Thursday; the senate recessed until Friday. Democratic house members did not immediately choose a successor to Rayburn's former majority leadership post.

WATER FOUNTAIN—Here's Atlanta's supply of aqua pura bubbling up through the pavement out at West Peachtree and Fourteenth street where one of the city's biggest water mains burst last night, cutting one-fourth of the city off from water. When the 36-inch cast iron main first broke, it tore a great crater in the street and sidewalk and threw a column of water higher than a two-story building. The pressure had been reduced when this picture was taken. Millions of gallons flowed through the break.

First National Observes 75th Birthday Today

Many Visitors Will Be Bank's Guests at 'Open House.'

Celebration of its seventy-fifth year will be held today by the First National Bank with open-house from 10 o'clock until 2 o'clock, 4 o'clock until 6 o'clock and from 8 o'clock until 10 o'clock, with officers and directors serving as a reception committee, aided by many employees in costumes of the 60s.

Numerous out-of-town visitors are expected.

The institution, the oldest in the southeast and largest between Baltimore and New Orleans, was chartered as the Atlanta National Bank September 14, 1865, with an original capital of $100,000. Its total transactions now number 10,000,000 annually, involving $5,000,000.

Virtually every name of importance in Atlanta's development since the War Between the States has been connected with the bank or its predecessor institutions, among them General Alfred Austell, the present Robert F. Maddox and his father, Robert F. Maddox; William Lawson Peel, Robert J. Lowry, John F. Murphy, James W. English and John K. Otley.

Emphasizing the city's growth, a memorial publication issued by the bank recounts:

"In 1865, Atlanta possessed little other than 10,000 war weary inhabitants—and courage. The southeast had its wealth of native resources—and a population determined to go forward. The First National Bank (then) had one small room in the residence of General Alfred Austell, $100,000 in cash—and an ideal of service."

The Austell home stood on the site of the present Federal Reserve Bank.

Break in Main Floods Homes, Cuts Off Water in Great Area

Entire City Put at Mercy of Possible Flames as Pressure Drops; Serious Damage Done to Buckling Streets and Side Walls.

Break in one of the city's four 36-inch water mains at West Peachtree street and Fourteenth street shortly before 7 o'clock last night interrupted water service in thousands of homes and businesses in the downtown, north and eastern sections of the city and laid the entire city at the mercy of possible fire as pressure in the mains dropped from 115 pounds to 30 pounds.

Cause of the break was not determined.

More than two million gallons of water gushed from the large "D" shape break in the huge pipe, flooding streets, homes and cellars along Fourteenth street between West Peachtree and State streets and causing serious damage to street and sidewalk pavements.

The pavement on Fourteenth street between West Peachtree street and Spring buckled in scores of places and at the spot where the pipe gave way there was a hole fifteen feet deep and 25 feet wide.

A 60-foot Georgia Power Company pole, within five feet of where the break occurred, threatened for a while to topple and workmen estimated that at one time it had leaned at least twenty degrees from its upright position. Serious damage was averted when workmen climbed to the roof of an adjoining two-story building and anchored the pole with ropes.

City Water Works Superintendent W. Zode Smith, who directed the work at the scene of the break, said he was unable to estimate the damage. Meanwhile, W. M. Rapp, veteran superintendent of construction and distribution, got out of a sick bed to direct replacement of the broken main and to supervise resumption of service.

Every available man was called out and Rapp estimated that the service was interrupted approximately two hours.

Step To Avert 'Terrible Fate,' Roosevelt Says

Calls for Governors To Provide for Suitable Registration Places.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—President Roosevelt signed the draft act today, fixed October 16 as registration day for 16,500,000 young Americans now subject to compulsory military training, and asserted that the United States was marshalling its strength to avert "the terrible fate of nations whose weakness invited attack."

In addition, the Chief Executive called upon the governors of the states to provide suitable places for the registration, urged local election officials "and other patriotic citizens" to man the registration boards and asked employers to give their affected employees "sufficient time off" to present themselves and fill out the forms.

Enlistment System.

Mr. Roosevelt, moreover, emphasized a section of the act and a phase of the building up of the Army which received much discussion in congress—the voluntary enlistment system. All between 18 and 35, inclusive, he said in a formal statement, will be offered an opportunity to volunteer for a one-year period of service and training, and those who offer themselves—provided they are suitable—are to be accepted before any others are selected.

The new law itself requires that all who on October 16 have attained the 21st anniversary of their birth and have not passed the 36th year must register. A national drawing by lot will determine the order in which questionnaires will be mailed to the men. On the basis of the questionnaires, local boards will place the men in various classifications—those available for immediate service, those deferred because of dependents, etc.

Local Selection.

The local boards will select sufficient men from among those available for immediate service to fill the quota for the area. Those so selected will undergo physical examinations and, if they pass, will be inducted into service for one year.

"In the military service," Mr. Roosevelt said, "they will be intelligently led, comfortably clothed, well fed, and adequately armed and equipped for basic training. By the time they get physically hardened, mentally disciplined and properly trained in fundamen-

Here Is How Draft Program Is To Operate

Procedure From Registration To Final Call Outlined.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP) Here is how the draft will work: On October 16, all men 21 to 35, inclusive, will register at registration places to be established in each neighborhood.

Local boards—it is intended to have 6,000 to 6,500—will shuffle the registration cards and give each a number.

A series of numbers will be drawn in Washington by lot. When the first number is drawn, each man who has the corresponding number in a local board's file will be put down as the first man liable for service from his local group.

Questionnaires then will be sent to the men, in the order in which their numbers were drawn, asking the number of dependents, physical disabilities, etc.

On the basis of this information, the men will be classified as follows: Class I (available for immediate service), Class II (service deferred because engaged in essential occupation), Class III (service deferred because of dependents), and Class IV (service deferred by law—legislators, judges, etc.).

Meantime, a Washington board will determine a quota for each state, based on the population and number of men from that state already in the army or navy. From this quota, will be deducted the number of men who volunteer for a year's training.

Called in Order. Enough men will then be taken from Class I in each state to fill out the quota. They will be called in the order in which their numbers were drawn in the national lottery.

Each man called will receive a physical examination. If he cannot meet army requirements, he will be passed over and the next man taken.

Men in the deferred classes will not be called unless there are not enough Class I men to meet the army's needs.

tals, the flow of critical munitions from factory to combat units will meet the full requirements for their advanced training.

"In the military service, Americans from all walks of life, rich and poor, country-bred and city-raised, farmer, student, manual laborer and white collar worker, will learn to live side by side, to depend upon each other in military drills and maneuvers, and to appreciate each other's dignity as American citizens."

Wider Tolerance. "Universal service will bring not only greater preparedness to meet the threat of war, but a wider distribution of tolerance and understanding to enjoy the blessings of peace."

Mr. Roosevelt signed the bill, seated at a table in the spacious cabinet room, its tall French windows open to the gentle breezes of a balmy September afternoon.

BLOOD PRESSURE TEST—Lieutenant C. S. LeCraw, a nephew of the mayor-elect, yesterday was inducted into the regular army and, as part of a strenuous physical examination at the armory-auditorium, submitted to a blood pressure test given by Captain Burch J. Roberts. All in all, 114 Atlanta guardsmen took the examination which paves the way for one year of training at Camp Jackson.

Behind him, stood Chairman Sheppard, Democrat, Texas, of the Senate Military Committee, and Chairman May, Democrat, Kentucky, of the corresponding committee of the house. He used two pens and handed one to each.

Secretary of War Stimson and General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, also were present.

The second pen appeared to give the President some difficulty and he dipped it repeatedly in the ink well before he could use it satisfactorily. At one point, Mr. Roosevelt could not recall the date. An aide prompted him and he added that to his signature.

When the ceremony had been completed, he lit a cigaret, tilted back in his chair and read for the newsreels the statement he had given the press.

Registration Date. The registration date was fixed by a proclamation, in which the President also said that "America stands at the crossroads of its destiny," adding:

"Time and distance have been shortened. A few weeks have seen great nations fall. We cannot remain indifferent to the philosophy of force now rampant in the world. The terrible fate of nations whose weakness invited attack is too well known to us all."

"We must and will marshal our great potential strength to fend off war from our shores. We must and will prevent our land from becoming a victim of aggression."

In National Guard armories throughout the land, meanwhile, some 60,000 militiamen participated in the guard's first federal mobilization since the World War, called out for a year's training by a previous presidential order.

During the day, the White House announced that of the first 400,000 men to be called for the draft, 36,000 would be Negroes.

Guard General Selection Up To Talmadge

Rivers To Name Choice of New Governor in Interests of Defense.

The sharp and bloody political hatchets which Governor E. D. Rivers and Governor-elect Eugene Talmadge carry for each other may be buried in the interest of national defense when the time comes to appoint an adjutant general to succeed General John E. Stoddard.

General Stoddard will be called to active duty as a major of artillery on November 15, and on that date will have to give up his state post as adjutant general.

Under ordinary circumstances his place would be filled by a Rivers appointee, who would serve from that time until Governor Talmadge takes the chair, when the Talmadge administration would make a new appointment.

The new adjutant general, though, will be faced with the complex and important task of administering the selective service regulations under the conscription act, and the Rivers administration feels that it would be unwise to appoint a man to serve only for the brief space from November 15 to January 1.

In view of that fact, The Constitution learned yesterday that Governor Rivers would leave the selection of the man up to Governor Talmadge, and would make the appointment of Talmadge's choice.

Herman Talmadge, speaking for his father and evidently smelling a political mouse, was at first cold toward the plan.

"It's absolutely impossible that Ed Rivers and papa will get together on any question about patronage," he said. "When papa takes office he will appoint his own adjutant general."

When it was explained that Talmadge would have the power of choice anyway, he said: "Well, in that case, we will consider it."

Three Atlanta Guard Groups Are Examined

114 Men and Officers Undergo Physical Tests; To Leave Friday.

Three Atlanta National Guard units with 114 men and officers underwent physical examinations given by regular army officers at the armory auditorium yesterday, following induction of the units into a period of active training.

The bulk of Atlanta's National Guardsmen, who are members of the affected 30th Division, belong to the 105th Medical Regiment, commanded by Major George H. Cochran and Captain Jewell T. Hutchins. It is composed of 13 officers and 74 men.

Also inducted were 15 men in the local headquarters detachment of the 30th Division and three officers and eight men connected with a headquarters detachment of special troops.

The former guardsmen, now regular army men, will remain in Atlanta through Thursday. The next three days will be devoted to filling out induction forms, completing resignation and honorable discharge procedures and recruiting the units to a full peace-time strength authorized by the guard bill.

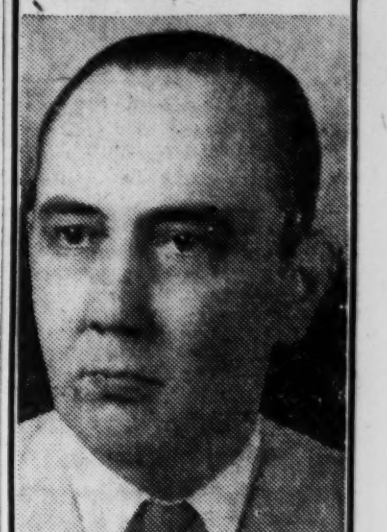

Friday morning the men will leave for Camp Jackson, S. C., where, along with 3,000 other Georgians, they will undergo a year of active training under army supervision.

The physical examination required by the army is more strenuous than the guard requirements and a few of the Atlanta members will be eliminated from service. Their vacancies will be automatically filled from a reserve list.

In 1790, the imports of the United States totaled $23,000,000 and exports reached $20,205,156.

Soldiers' 'Dogs' May Receive Experts' Care

Dr. Dowling, President of Chiropodists, Wants To Aid Infantry.

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE.
Dr. Gus T. Dowling, of Atlanta, president of the National Association of Chiropodists, urged yesterday that Uncle Sam remember the walking soldier as he concentrates his thoughts on a mechanized Army. Despite the power of aircraft, destroyers and submarines, there always must be the infantry.

And with groups of men march, carry guns, and train for actual defense, they cannot escape blistered heels, soft corns, and ill-fitting shoes which tire their "dogs."

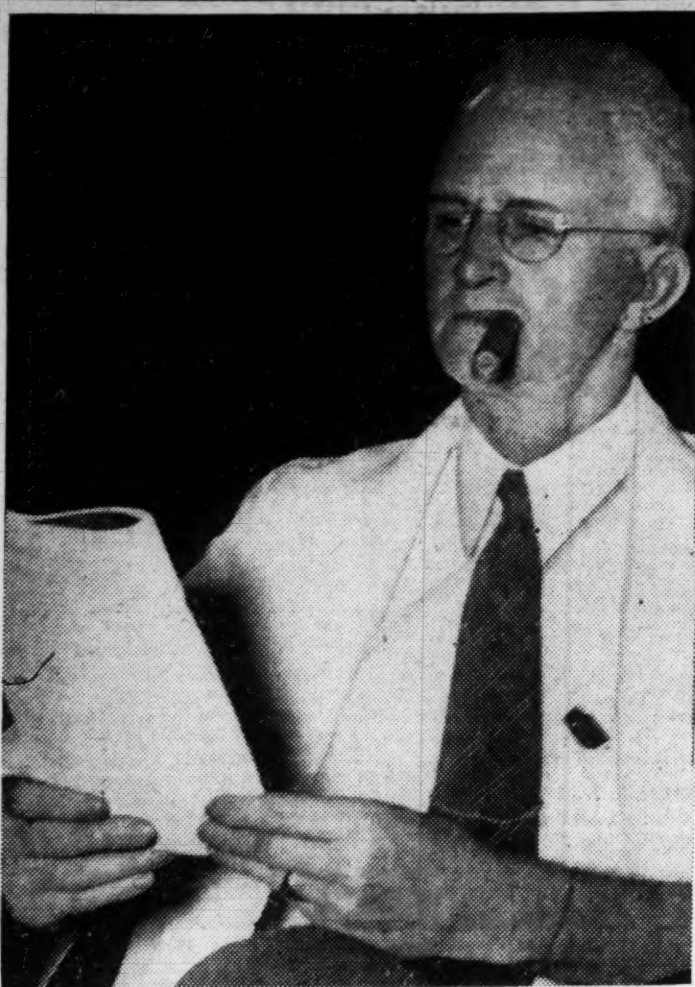

Emphasizing the necessity of remembering the soldiers who tramp for miles each day, Dr. Dowling said that, under the plans of his organization, there may be within each battalion members of the newly developed volunteer chiropody-podiatry corps who can patch the tired foot and thus assist in a still further defense measure—against aching feet.

Many Chiropodists.
In the National Guard, the Army, Navy, Marines may be many chiropodists; and, he points out, when some of the soldiers walk too long and find their shoes rubbing blisters, corns, or sore spots on their feet, the volunteer chiropodists and podiatrists can stop and give immediate relief.

In addition to the more common foot ailments Dr. Dowling said that one of the greatest discomforts for conscripted Americans will be caused by shoes which are too tight or too heavy. When a man complains of these pains, then the new division of the medical corps will patch the feet with felt and other necessary materials for making the journey onward and the defense preparation more simple.

The corps will be ready to serve the National Guard, and the regular Army and Navy, he said. Many other countries already have such services.

Feet Neglected.
The feet of the men in the services of the United States are being neglected, he charged, while the feet of men in peacetime services in foreign countries are "given the best care." The volunteer chiropody-podiatry corps is to offer its services within the vicinity of the location of industry and commerce. Members have asked the War Department to establish training units in areas adjacent to the draftees and they have requested that those selected for compulsory training be permitted to continue their regular employment and to live at their own homes by arranging the hours for military training at the nearest armories or training fields on a part-time daily schedule. By this means, he said, the draftees may continue their regular employment and keep their families and homes intact which will save cost to the government and inconvenience to those involved.

WANTS TO PATCH SOLDIERS' FEET—Dr. Gus T. Dowling, of Atlanta, president of the National Association of Chiropodists, said yesterday that his organization wants to form a volunteer chiropody-podiatry corps to patch Uncle Sam's men's feet. They need not walk for hours with aching "dogs" if some member of their battalion is a chiropodist. And so his organization has gone ahead, presenting its idea to the War Department.

Dr. Dowling pointed out that the corps will not overlap the already established medical corps; that the purpose of his organization is far different from engrossing, or attempting to engross, the designated duties of the medical corps.

The volunteer chiropody-podiatry corps' interest lies solely in patching Uncle Sam's men's feet so that they may go ahead marching and training without suffering from aching feet.

December-May Marriage Goes On the Rocks

'Papa Jim' Murden Deeded $5,000 Property in Matrimonial Deal

The December-May marriage of "Papa Jim" Murden and Mrs. Fannie May White last spring—a marriage marked by his formal deeding of some $5,000 of property to her with matrimony explicitly stated as the consideration—has joined the limbo of the snows of yesterday.

Papa Jim, who last was photographed for publication beaming happily upon his bride of 38 in the sitting room of their newly furnished haven, has gone to Robinson, Ga., to stay with relatives indefinitely.

Mrs. Murden is with members of her family in Brunswick, her childhood home.

The red-brick, brightly arranged bungalow at 1144 Wade street, N. E., where they repaired after the ceremony on February 13, 1940, is locked up, and the telephone has been disconnected.

Confirmation of the end of the romance, sometime in mid-August, was given yesterday by persons closely concerned with Papa Jim's legal affairs. The reason was described simply as incompatibility.

While his exact age was reserved by the elderly bridegroom, known to railroad men throughout Georgia as James R. Murden, he disclosed he had begun firing and engineering in 1892 after more than six years at other employment. He said he wanted a home, in explaining his marriage to reporters.

Among the property involved was a filling station on Edgewood avenue. The contract was filed in superior court here on May 28, attracting much attention.

Loan Sharks Hit By Labor Group

Loan sharks were described as "bootleggers of money" who employ "deceit, evasion, chicanery and ruthless methods of collection under an aura of legality" in a brief filed in the state supreme court yesterday by the American Federation of Labor.

The brief intervened on behalf of Georgia in pending litigation to regulate money-lenders. Joseph A. Padaway, of Washington, federation counsel, brought the bill. Rates as high as 1,000 per cent a year were cited. Atlanta "sharks" charge 240 per cent, it was said.

The first experimental railroad in America was built in 1809 by John Thomson in Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Council Again Refuses Bond Vote Recount

Allen's Appeal Ignored; Figures Showing Defeat Is Certified.

City council refused for a second time yesterday a recount of results of the $4,000,000 bond issue September 4 for hospital, school and fire department improvements and certified figures showing that all three issues were defeated.

The action was taken after James P. Allen, chairman of the Citizens' Bond Campaign Committee, took the floor to predict that the issues would pass on a recount, and asserted that "Roy LeCraw and you members of council owe it to yourself to find the correct returns from the bond balloting."

After council refused to review the ballots, Allen said "it looks like sinister politics, if that's the word, are still at work."

When the session opened, Councilman J. Allen Couch moved that the regular order of business be suspended to hear Allen. He said Allen had worked hard for the bonds and that he had something of importance to bring to the attention of members. Council sustained Couch and voted unanimously to hear Allen.

"There are several reasons why I think the bond election ballots should be recounted," said Allen. "I have had hundreds of persons call me and say they intended to vote for the bonds, but that they checked their ballots instead of striking out that portion for which they did not vote."

"The fact that none of the checks were marked for bonds estimated net increase of $375,914.20 for the current year.

The total increase for 1937 was placed at $307,198.67, but the school department received 30 per cent or $92,169.07 of this amount, and the estimated 1940 figure totals $564,163.14 over 1936 receipts, but schools will collect $169,248.94 of this figure leaving $393,914.20 to the treasury. The normal increase in additional taxes, however, will provide at least $18,000 in new revenue for 1941, leaving $375,914.20 which the incoming administration of Mayor-elect Roy LeCraw must absorb in the January finance sheet to reduce water rates to a $1 minimum a month.

Many interesting comparisons are shown in gallons pumped by the department, the number of users and the amounts collected from 1936, the last year before the 30 per cent increase in water rates became effective through June 30, 1940.

Although gross receipts of the department for 1936 were placed at $1,965,887.51, a figure $564,163.14 less than the $2,530,050.65 estimated gross for 1940, pumpage will increase only 968,950,000 gallons over the period.

In 1936 there was a total of 59,919 taps, as compared to an estimated 65,536 taps as of December 31, 1940. In 1939 taps increased 1,579 over the previous year, while the estimated increase in the taps for 1940 is set at 1,486.

A comparison of the gross receipts of the department, the gallons pumped, the number of taps and the new taps from 1936 and estimated through 1940 follows:

Year	Receipts	Gallons Pumped	Taps	Year
1936	$1,965,887.51	12,557,090,000	59,919	1936
1937	2,290,750.17	12,592,400,000	62,018	1937
1938	2,474,755.38	12,327,900,000	63,471	1938
1939	2,519,008.59	12,643,800,000	64,050	1939
*1940	1,331,605.60	6,763,020,000	63,793	*1940
1940	2,530,050.65	13,526,040,000	65,536	1940

NOTE: *Actual figures as of June 30, 1940. Estimated figures as of December 31, 1940.

Through September 13, 1940, there were a total of 66,201 taps in the system.

FUTILE PLEA—James P. Allen, chairman of the citizens' bond campaign committee, sponsoring the $4,000,000 September 4 bond issue, is shown as he made a futile appeal to city council yesterday to recount the ballots in an effort to establish that the bonds were passed.

means that these votes were not counted in favor of the issues, although they clearly intended that they be counted.

"If we recount the ballots and include the favorable checks I think the issues will pass. We should by all means establish the intent of the voters."

"There is a great deal of talk as to why council voted unanimously a week ago today to recount the ballots as I am now asking, and then last Friday reversed itself. There has been considerable talk about the sacredness of the ballot box, but the ballot box cannot be sacred unless there is a correct count."

"This is not a contest between men. It is an issue in which the general public is interested vitally. I hope council sees fit to make this recount. Unless it does so, the bonds will be a cloud over those ballot boxes. We are not charging anyone with fraud or dishonesty. We just think there was a misunderstanding. I think we will find several hundred votes for bonds which have not been counted for them."

"The 19,000 people who voted favorably on the issues, cannot understand why the recount is not authorized. If you vote a recount, you will receive the plaudits of the 400,000 people who live in and around Atlanta."

Couch was joined by Alderman Ed A. Gilliam in a motion to recount the bonds after Allen's appeal, but the effort was defeated. Councilman Charles L. Chosewood lost a demand for a division because the vote already had been announced.

Immediately after the demand for the recount was defeated, Councilman John A. White presented and council passed a resolution establishing a committee of five Atlanta leaders to recommend what changes they believe necessary in local registration laws.

Mayor Pro tem. Frank H. Reynolds, Allen, Mrs. J. D. Thomas, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters; Albert Gossett, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, and T. Earl Suttles, Fulton county tax collector, and registrar of that portion of Atlanta lying in Fulton county, were designated as members of the group. They are to formulate a plan and report before the end of the year.

This was interpreted to mean that a new try for bonds will be made early next spring.

Thugs Promise Ticket Fixing For Vote-Cone

Every Racketeer in Town Working Against Him, Recorder Says.

A charge that "every racketeer in Atlanta is openly promising to fix tickets in exchange for votes" for his opponent was made yesterday by Judge John L. Cone, candidate for re-election as city recorder in Wednesday's runoff primary.

"I do not believe the voters of Atlanta want to turn their traffic court over to the racketeers and let them roam the streets at will in their bug and liquor cars, endangering the lives and property of good citizens," Judge Cone said.

"I believe in equal justice to all and special privilege to none, be they racketeers, bankers or what not," Judge Cone said. "A racketeer speeding up and down our city streets is one of the deadliest enemies to our society and I, for one, cannot and will not be controlled by them nor will I be intimidated by the threats they are making against me."

The District of Columbia has an area of 69,245 square miles, of which 60.1 square miles are land.

Labor Leaders Demand Probe Of Plant Blast

Simmons, Gooze Deny Union Responsible; Lockout Charged.

Robert L. Simmons, special representative of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, and George L. Gooze, organizer of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday issued a statement urging an investigation into the explosion last Saturday night at the plant of the Atlanta Paper Company.

The statement follows: "The International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union and the American Federation of Labor are gravely concerned over the alleged dynamiting of the Atlanta Paper Company and the strike-breakers' homes. We publicly urged the solicitor general of Fulton county and all law enforcement officers of this city to prosecute those guilty of the alleged acts.

"We are likewise calling upon the United States attorney general's office to investigate and prosecute the Atlanta Paper Company for what we consider violation of the Federal Byrnes Anti-Strike-Breakers' Act. We do not know that the dynamiting was done by provocateurs in the employ of the Atlanta Paper Company, but certainly they were not friends of the labor movement or locked-out employees.

"There is no strike at the Atlanta Paper Company. The company has locked out its employees who were associated or became associated with the union. President George L. Berry, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union, has ordered all employees back to work and all matters in controversy to be submitted to impartial arbitration. The company refused and still refuses to permit the union to return its members to work, thereby enforcing a lockout. The company is attempting to continue operations with local and imported strikebreakers, rounding them up as best they can from several states.

WHERE WATER FAILED—More than one-fourth of Atlanta was without water for about two hours last night when one of the four biggest water mains in the city burst at Fourteenth and West Peachtree streets. Residents in the area roughly bounded by Spring and Edgewood avenue in the north and east sections were absolutely dry and the water pressure in the remainder of the city was extremely low. This map shows with the dark area where there was no water and the shaded part illustrates the sections where the pressure was so low many faucets would run only a drop.

"The undersigned labor officials have requested the company to arbitrate the controversy and have called upon the services of the State Department of Labor for this purpose, as well as requesting the assistance of a superior court judge to help us in securing the consent of the company to settle the controversy by arbitration. But up to the present the company has been adamant and continues to permit itself to be used as an agency to destroy collective bargaining and to oppose, by their tactics, union organization in their industry in the southeast.

"The organized labor movement has no other recourse but to wholeheartedly support the locked out employees until such time as this company will agree to American industrial relations and cease its Hitlerized policy of attempting to smear the organized labor movement and to persecute its old Atlanta employees.

"The union involved is perfectly willing to submit all matters in controversy to three impartial Atlanta citizens familiar with equitable union-management-industrial relations."

Work Will Begin Soon

On Aircraft Carrier Port

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 16. (AP)—Work will begin near here soon on a basin that eventually will be the home port of two of Uncle Sam's big aircraft carriers, Commander Carl H. Cotter said today.

The aircraft carrier basin, to be located near the point at which the St. John's river empties into the Atlantic ocean, will have docking and maintenance facilities for two of the broad-decked ships.

Break in Main Cuts Off Water In Great Area

the northwest corner of West Peachtree street and Fourteenth street, bore the brunt of the water damage. The store's basement, which Dr. J. L. Hawk, proprietor, said more than $3,000 worth of stock was stored, was flooded with more than six feet of water. He estimated the stock would be a total loss. Officials also feared that the water might have undermined one wall of the drug store building.

The main floor of the drug store was covered with at least three inches of red mud driven in through a side door by the gushing water that at times leaped as high as 25 feet as it poured through the cracks in the cement sidewalk and street.

Thousands of Atlantans were attracted to the scene and made things difficult for a corps of policemen under Captain Luther Carroll, who sought to keep the crowd away from the treacherous street, the gushing water and the swaying power and trolley lines.

All traffic—except buses and trackless trolleys—was routed around the scene of the break.

The break, "D" shaped, extended the width of the pipe and was 24 inches wide at one point.

Smith said the pipe had been in the ground since 1912.

He said a full crew would work all night until the main was repaired.

From the time the break was discovered—6:50 o'clock—it required about one hour to shut off the valves and stop the flow of water.

Immediately after this was completed electric pumps cleaned out the hole and the crew began installing the new main.

One humorous incident connected with the break occurred at 8:20 o'clock when a post office messenger drove up to get mail out of a letter box at the corner. But instead of finding the box, he found a large hole. The box had disappeared into it.

The broken main is one of the four supplying water to the entire city. Two large pipes, 30 inches and 36 inches in size, run from the pumping station to the center of town via Hemphill avenue, and a third main 30 inches in size, runs beneath Curran street from the pumping station to the downtown area.

During the two hours before pressure in the three unbroken mains was restored to normal, the entire city was left almost without fire protection. Only one alarm was sounded during that period, however, and that was for firemen to repair a broken refrigeration plant in a downtown hotel. Gas masks, instead of water, sufficed.

Most of the business houses in the downtown area were affected by the sudden shortage. Many of the hotels, however, have their own wells or storage tanks and gave uninterrupted service to their patrons.

In restaurants, late diners were forced to do without water, although, in one restaurant, patrons were served bottled charged water at the expense of the restaurant.

Soda fountains were without both plain and charged water, and, being unable to wash glasses, after a few minutes, were unable to serve milk and other drinks requiring no water. Soda fountain managers reported, however, that most of their customers were taking it good naturedly.

Severely Handicapped. Hospitals, most of them with no water supply except that furnished by the city, were severely handicapped by the failure. Supper was done, and the dishes washed at most of the institutions, but the problem of supplying water to surgeons to scrub with before operations was a serious one.

In all of the institutions with operations scheduled, enough water was found, however, to enable the operations to proceed without delay.

Few of the patients did without, though, as the nurses went thirsty while the sick drank water was left in pitchers and tanks. At least one hospital—Emory—was unaffected.

Virtually all ice-making units in the city were forced to cut off completely.

In other business houses, not operating at night, including laundries and breweries, the problem was to keep up steam in all night boilers. Many such businesses, fearing there would be no water for several hours, were preparing to extinguish the boiler fires for fear of an explosion.

This situation was relieved, however, when the water supply was resumed.

Canada Lauds Editorial by Ralph Jones

'Twelve O'Clock and All's Well' Republished in Newspapers, Leaflets.

A trenchant, provocative editorial, "Twelve O'Clock and All's Well," published in The Constitution from the pen of its associate editor, Ralph T. Jones, is winning wide acclaim in Canada.

The article, dealing with the staying powers of the British people in hours of crisis, and through long periods of wearing travail, was republished in the Canadian press, and then adopted by the Canadian government in behalf of its second war loan campaign.

In addition to the reproduction in periodicals, the editorial has been printed upon official leaflets in enormous quantities and circulated with literature advocating the loan.

At the instance of Canadian newspapers, the Associated Press prepared a brief biography of the author for publication. Mr. Jones, originally from England, has been a member of The Constitution staff for 25 years.

Council Votes Fund To Buy Airport Land

Action Furthers Plans for WPA Project To Extend Runways.

A fund of $17,000 for the first purchase of additional acreage for extension of runways at the municipal airport was provided yesterday by city council.

Recommended by the finance committee, the sum will be augmented from time to time until the 140 acres necessary are bought and the land is owned in fee simple. WPA will launch a $500,000 grading and paving project immediately on completion of the purchases being executed jointly by the city and Fulton county.

Council also set up a fund of $1,500 for engineering services to prepare detailed plans for the improvements, and paid three assessors—Cone Maddox, James A. Watson and Douglas W. Matthews—$50 each for their services during condemnation proceedings.

A fund of $12,500 for completion of installation of the new asphalt plant and $5,000 for water-proofing the municipal auditorium were authorized.

City schools received a total of $14,789.56 in new funds as a result of additional 1940 anticipations made by the budget commission and city council. Under the law, the schools receive 30 per cent of all city receipts, and when it became necessary to set up additional amounts for the airport, the auditorium and the public works department, schools got their cut.

Dempsey Says FBI Probe Due In New Mexico

Trailing Candidate for Senate Charges Hatch Act Violations.

SANTA FE, N. M., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Representative J. J. Dempsey, trailing in his race with Senator Denis Chavez for the Democratic senatorial nomination, told reporters in reply to questions today that there would be "30 to 40 FBI agents in Santa Fe by tonight."

These men, Dempsey said, "are the same who investigated and disclosed the workings of the Pendergast gang in Kansas City."

Dempsey said "he presumed" the agents would investigate "frequent reports of coercion and intimidation by political bosses."

"New Mexico political bosses," said Dempsey, "do not seem to realize that the Hatch clean politics law is in effect. The people have been intimidated."

Meanwhile, Massachusetts and New York were spiritedly preparing for primary elections tomorrow.

In Connecticut a three-cornered fight for the U. S. senatorial nomination held the attention of Republicans tonight on the eve of their 1940 state convention. The avowed candidates in the field were Paul L. Cornell, preparatory school owner; former Lieutenant Governor Clifford B. Wilson; and Brigadier General John H. DENTIST LEADER — Dr. Robert L. Dement, Atlanta dentist, has been chosen president-elect of the American Academy of Periodontology. He will take office in October.

Dr. Dement Named Dental Unit Head

Dr. Robert L. Dement, Atlanta dentist, has been chosen president-elect of the American Academy of Periodontology and will take office this October at the annual meeting in Houston, Texas.

The election took place Saturday in Cleveland.

Dr. Dement, a graduate of the old Atlanta Dental College, is a member of the staff of the Atlanta-Southern Dental College where he teaches periodontology.

He has been active in the national organization for many years.

Hotels, Movies, Restaurants Hit By Water Break

Police and Fire Departments, Deluged With Phone Calls.

An epidemic of headaches hit Atlanta last night.

It started shortly before 7 o'clock when one of the city's big water mains broke at West Peachtree and Fourteenth streets.

For nearly two hours afterward, troubles mounted for almost everyone in practically all sections of the city.

Downtown Atlanta was virtually without water supply. Apartment houses and homes suffered to a great extent. The city water, police and fire departments were deluged with phone calls.

Housewives called the city water department to complain that their sinks were full of dinner dishes. Cautious operators of hotels and theaters communicated with the fire department to ascertain the extent of the trouble and that facilities would be available in the event of fire.

Acute Predicaments.

Restaurant and soda fountain men likewise had their share of worries. The water shortage coming at the peak of the downtown dinner hour, a majority of establishments were without reserve supplies and were placed in acute predicaments.

One ingenious restaurant operator, however, solved an important problem by melting ice and draining hot water reserved in coffee-making containers to satisfy the thirst of patrons.

All soda fountains were without drinking water and several reported the in reserve supplies of carbonated water were dissipated before normal service was restored.

Hotels conserved their water supplies as much as possible, but large downtown hostilities were completely without water for more than 30 minutes and bell-boys and clerks were kept busy explaining to complaining guests.

Air Conditioning Off.

Air conditioning was cut off in two theaters when water in huge reserve tanks were exhausted. Rest rooms and drinking fountains likewise were temporarily out of use.

Several theaters and hotels posted guards in all parts of their buildings as a precaution against the outbreak of fires.

When the water supply finally returned to normalcy, hotel workers discovered their troubles weren't over. Slight damages were reported in rooms where guests had sought to take baths and had carelessly neglected to turn off the water faucets.

Restaurant employees also encountered added difficulties—piled up dinner dishes that had to be washed before they could call it a day.

DOES STRIKE TWICE.

Who said lightning doesn't strike twice in the same place? The home of Paul Lackman, at Conshohocken, Pa., was damaged by lightning twice in four days.

Orders Issued For Calling Up Stoddard Staff

LeCraw May Be Affected by New Guard Instructions.

Adjutant General John E. Stoddard yesterday was authorized to call members of his state staff to active duty for one year but whether or not Major Roy LeCraw, mayor-elect and a recent appointee to the staff, will be affected was not clear.

According to the order, issued by the War Department, Stoddard may call the staff to aid in selective service detail work. The order included the name of Major William M. Ward, who resigned last August and was replaced by LeCraw.

"Apparently the department has not cleared Major LeCraw's transfer," Stoddard said yesterday, "and so I have not been requested to call him to duty."

LeCraw was transferred from the 30th division to the state staff two weeks ago so that he could serve his approaching term as mayor without being subject to immediate call to active service.

If the state staff is called up, however, he may be affected. General Stoddard, however, pointed out that LeCraw could ask for a place on the inactive list which would not subject him to active duty unless war were declared. In all probability LeCraw will do this if the state staff is called up.

Other members of the group are Major Leroy Cowart, who began a year of active service yesterday as United States property and disbursing officer; Colonel James H. Skelton, Major Thomas O. Callaway, Major Charles H. Cox, Major Herbert C. Hatcher, Captain Lutheran T. Gillen and Captain Harry A. Heins.

In pointing out that Major Cowart so far was the only member of the state staff called to active duty, General Stoddard said, "It may not be necessary to call out the entire state staff. Perhaps enough of them will volunteer to carry on the selective service detail work so that a 'draft' will not be necessary."

Lawrence Tibbett Cancels Fall Tour

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Lawrence Tibbett, noted Metropolitan Opera baritone, must not sing for four months because of a state of high tension in the muscles of his larynx.

As a result, his manager announced last night Tibbett has been forced to cancel his entire fall concert and opera tour.

TIBBETT'S CANCELLATION WON'T AFFECT ATLANTA.

Cancellation of Lawrence Tibbett's fall concert and opera tour will not affect his two 1941 Atlanta performances, Marvin McClellan said.

France Fears Japanese Move On Indo-China

U. S. Could Halt Step by Providing Planes, Officials Agree.

HANOI, French Indo-China, Sept. 16.—(P)—France was believed in well-informed quarters here tonight to be in imminent peril of losing French Indo-China to Japan.

French officials admit privately that negotiations already approved in principle by Vichy and Tokyo are likely to result within a few days in an agreement permitting Japan to establish perhaps 25,000 troops on Indo-China soil.

Authoritative French, Japanese and foreign sources said this may prompt China to send her own soldiers across the colonial frontier and precipitate a conflict which might mean the beginning of the end of France's 60-year rule of this East Asian territory of 230,000 square miles.

In all quarters, official and civilian, the conviction is expressed that only the United States could prevent Japan from gaining a possibly unshakable hold, but fear of arousing Japanese feeling has prevented Indo-China authorities from soliciting such aid.

French sources said that a mission had been sent to the United States last July, but that both it and the government here had failed to obtain warplanes, and other material sought in the United States.

The French military command holds that the colony's 20,000 French and 100,000 native troops have enough artillery and light arms to offer formidable resistance to any land attack but, with only a handful of warplanes, virtually no anti-aircraft equipment and only half a dozen warships, could not withstand a full-force invasion.

WINS ELKS' AWARD—R. Thornton Savage (right), of 1255 McLendon avenue, N. E., receiving from Young H. Arnold Urges 'Sound' State Finance Plan

Proposes Constitutional Provision Limiting Appropriations.

A constitutional provision voiding any appropriation bill passed by the general assembly unless the appropriation is within 98 per cent of the actual revenue the previous year was suggested by State Auditor Zach Arnold yesterday as a means of balancing Georgia's income and expenditures.

"Now as in the past," Arnold said in an address before the Rotary Club, "appropriations and allocations are made more in accordance with public sentiment than with a sound financial basis or a proper consideration of needs involved."

"For instance, in 1937, we submitted to the general assembly an estimate of income on the proposed alcoholic beverage tax of $1,500,000 annually. Before they were through with the speechmaking, members of the assembly had raised the estimate to give $5,000,000 and passed appropriations absorbing the same."

The difference between the first estimate of revenue and the assembly's estimate, even after three years of taxing liquor, is $3,000,000, almost the exact amount needed this past year to balance the budget and pay in full all appropriations enacted by the assembly, Arnold said.

"If appropriations could be made within the income, then, I believe, power should be given the Governor or Budget Bureau to adjust the appropriations up or down in an amount not to exceed 10 per cent so that funds could be shifted from one agency to another to meet the changing conditions that come about during the time the assembly is not in session."

Training Camp At Toccoa To Get $500,000

Money Will Come From Huge WPA National Defense Fund.

Nearly half a million dollars has been earmarked by the WPA for construction of a Georgia National Guard training camp near Toccoa, construction of which began March 19, it was announced yesterday by Adjutant General John E. Stoddard.

The money will come from the huge WPA national defense fund and will be used to construct 31 permanent buildings for the first of two large guard "areas," each capable of providing training space for 3,000 guardsmen or draftees, as the case may be.

Government labor already has erected a huge rifle range to serve the two areas and has completed the grading for one of the areas. The appropriation will finance the construction of mess halls, infirmary, administration buildings and warehouses for Area One and the grading of Area Two.

Stoddard said the training camp has been a matter of official approval for nearly two years, but the defense fund made its realization possible.

Ostensibly the camp will be devoted to summer training of Georgia National Guardsmen. However, with all guardsmen inducted in the regular army by November 15 it is believed that the camp may be used for training the civilian conscripted army in this section.

The camp is located on highway 13, five miles west of Toccoa on the road to Cornelia. Present allocations will confine it to a regimental camp, but eventually with improvements it will become a brigade or even a division headquarters.

Prohibitionists File Candidates' Names

Names of Prohibition party candidates for president and vice president were filed yesterday with Secretary of State John B. Wilson to be placed on the Georgia ballot for the November 5 election.

The candidates are Roger W. Babson, of Massachusetts, writer and business economist, nominee for president, and Edgar V. Moorman, of Illinois, nominee for vice president.

Nominees of the Democratic and Republican parties already have been certified, although the secretary of state has refused to certify the Communist party candidates on the advice of Attorney General Ellis Arnall.

U. S. Indicts Cobb's Former County Agent

L. R. Langley Accused of Falsifying Records of Pay Roll.

L. R. Langley, former Cobb county agricultural agent, was made defendant in a nine-count indictment returned yesterday by the federal grand jury charging him with falsifying pay roll records to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Langley, who also was in charge of county soil conservation work and secretary-treasurer of the county Rural Electrification Association, resigned his position last April.

$2,000 Total Charged. According to Assistant United States Attorney H. H. Tysinger, who presented the evidence to the jurors, the defendant obtained more than $2,000 in two years by falsifying hours worked by members of the administrative staff of his office, of the county Agricultural Conservation Association and committees of the producers.

Count nine of the indictment stated that government payments totaling $1,180 were made to R. W. Pritchard for a year's work as assistant county performance supervisor and county performance reporter. R. W. Pritchard, Tysinger said, is Langley's mother-in-law.

Count one charged payments of two typists for 27 days at $2.50 a day for work that was never done; count two charged fraudulent certification of vouchers for expenses of an administrative assistant; count four, false statement of administrative expenses in the office of the County Agricultural Association.

More Charges. Count five, fraudulent statement of 27 days' work at $3 a day of an assistant in the conservation association and producers' committee office; count six, a false statement to the effect that an administrative assistant worked 28 days in the conservation office at $3 a day; count seven, a false statement that $77 was due an assistant for 22 days' work; and count eight, a false statement that $78 was due another assistant for 26 days' work.

New Radio Aids Policemen in Exciting Chase

Two-Way Transmitting Plays Important Part in Recovering Car.

Fulton county's new two-way police radio played an important part yesterday afternoon in an exciting auto chase which resulted in the recovery of a stolen car after it had crashed into a honey-laden truck and a street car at Bankhead avenue and Ashby street.

The driver of the truck, E. G. Summerall, of Waycross, was treated at Grady hospital for slight injuries and the driver of the stolen car, James Hightower, Negro, of a Little street address, was booked at Fulton Tower on charges of auto theft, speeding, running past four traffic signals and driving without a license. Bond was set at $1,500.

The stolen car, a new expensive sedan, was reported missing at noon Wednesday by the owner, E. Ralph Paris, of 521 Peachtree Battle avenue. City police spotted it two hours later in northwest Atlanta, but the machine got away.

Shortly after 2 o'clock County Policeman Marion Riley radioed headquarters at the courthouse he was pursuing the sedan along Bankhead highway coming toward Atlanta. Hardly had his report come in before County Policeman Burton Carroll radioed he was after the same car as Riley because it had run through a school crossing he was watching.

For the next few minutes the air crackled with conversation between Carroll and Desk Sergeant Fred Wray. Carroll, driving with one hand and holding his microphone with the other, kept Wray posted on the 70-mile-per-hour progress of the chase. Wray directed other city and county police cars to the vicinity.

Carroll was giving his location on Bankhead when the Negro in the sedan smashed into the honey truck and then hit the street car. Almost immediately other city and county cars were on the spot. Carroll and Riley were back on the watch at their school crossings before 20 minutes had elapsed.

Thomas Jefferson, as United States minister to France, was an observer of the French Revolution in 1789.

INDICTED—L. R. Langley, former Cobb county agricultural agent, was indicted by a federal grand jury yesterday on charges of making false entries in his books and defrauding the government of approximately $2,000.

Two Policemen Civilians Killed in Riot in India

Men Demand Comfort, Style Writer Says

U. S. Males Buy Four-Fifths of Suit Each Per Year.

By YOLANDE GWIN.

He may be the well-dressed man, but statistics show that only four-fifths of a suit per man per year is the average in the United States.

And he may not be as fastidious and fancy in his choice of dress as his Colonial ancestors, but Mr. 1940 has the advantage over his predecessors in that he goes in for comfort and for general favorites in the fashion line.

This is the opinion of Dorothy Stote, nationally famous writer and author of "Men Too Wear Clothes" and "Making The Most Of Your Looks." She said here last night:

"It may be the modern way of living such as the various conveniences and the trend of business participation, which makes a man demand comfort in his clothes, or it may be the fact that he wants a conservative suit."

"Personal observation from man to man plays a large part in setting the trend of styles. Let John Doe admire his neighbor's hat or suit and what happens? John Doe buys one too. That is the best fashion dictatorship I know of. As for color, the style now is getting to be a little less violent than during the past year."

Miss Stote pointed out that women have a great influence on the style trend of their men, for maybe the man won't admit it, but they dress to a large extent on the advice from the "little woman." She adds: "A man who is born a good dresser needs no advice as to style. He just knows by instinct. The others have to be told."

Who Is Fighting Judge John L. Cone?

Who is fighting Judge Cone? Is it the law-abiding citizen whose streets he has helped make safe for themselves and their children? Is it the casual traffic law violator upon whom Judge Cone may have had to levy a small fine for failure to observe some minor regulation? Is it the man or the woman who has helped to make Atlanta the third safest city in the country? Decidedly not. The opposition to Judge Cone comes from the lawless element, the liquor runner and the bug operators, the drunken drivers who want to speed up and down our city streets, past school houses and churches at 80 and 90 miles an hour without a moment's regard for the lives and property of their fellow citizens, maiming and killing school children and otherwise making Atlanta a dangerous place in which to live or rear a child.

Judge Cone's opposition urges the voter to "ask your lawyer" who he is supporting for Recorder. That's a good idea. Ask your lawyer if he is a law-abiding practicing attorney. He'll tell you that Judge Cone has proven an able and faithful public servant and should be re-elected in Wednesday's runoff primary. A few police station lawyers who Judge Cone has refused to allow to prey on Atlanta citizens may be fighting Judge Cone but not the hundreds of lawyers who are building and keeping their reputations practicing law.

Judge Cone helped to create Atlanta's traffic court in order that citizens accused of violating some minor traffic regulation might not be thrown in contact with the lawless element usually found in a police court. Are there good citizens who occasionally and perhaps thoughtlessly violate the traffic ordinances and are willing to fight Judge Cone? Few, if any. They realize that the traffic problem is one which confronts the entire city and they are willing to do their part to eliminate accidents. Yes, it's true Judge Cone has had to levy some pretty stiff fines against the liquor runners, the bug operators and the drunken drivers. But in so doing he has made them realize that they must be careful of the lives and property of others. They want to be above the traffic law just like they want to be above all other law. But Judge Cone hasn't been severe on the man or the woman who really want to observe the law and keep Atlanta safe. He has had to levy small fines, to be sure. But in so doing he has made another supporter for the safety program. Thousands of good citizens whom Judge Cone has had to fine have called him to pledge him their support. The people of Atlanta want their streets kept safe. They want an able and fair judge over their traffic court and they do not want a court which would open up an era of "ticket fixing" by bug operators, liquor runners and other racketeers to plague Atlanta and run up a horrible toll of life and property that will make every good citizen shudder.

ATLANTA, GA., SEPTEMBER 17, 1940.

The Price We'd Pay

It is not necessary to concede that Adolf Hitler may win the war with Britain, to analyze, at this time, the effect of a Nazi victory upon this country. In purely academic sense, we may seek to forecast the economic consequences, to the United States, of a German victory, even while we hold firm to the faith that such a foul thing as Nazidom cannot, in the final outcome, defeat Britain and all she means for freedom and world decency.

A staff economist for the publication Business Week has completed an exhaustive study of the consequences of a German victory. It was a task requiring months, and began even before Norway was invaded. War events that have followed have, of necessity, changed some of the premises upon which the survey was founded.

Hitler, flushed with victory over Britain, might take either one of two courses. Or both. He could either plan and prepare for armed attack against America, or he can set in motion a trade and economic war that would seek to wrest from this country every commercial advantage and make Germany the economic overlord of the entire world.

Whatever his course, the survey shows that the price which the United States would have to pay for a German victory would be staggering.

It would, in any event, require vast expenditures for armed defense of the hemisphere. Should a Hitler victory come quickly, it is conservatively estimated this country would be spending, on the armed forces alone, $10,000,000,000 a year by 1941.

This would, inevitably, draw much manpower out of productive industry. It would, in the long run, mean a great increase in taxation. On the other hand, it would bring, for a little while, a sharp increase in national income and a temporary sense of increased prosperity.

German industry would have at least an equal footing with this country in so far as raw materials go. With industry utterly subject to the state, Hitler could direct it ruthlessly to the end of capturing all world trade. He might be able, even, to force onto our own market automobiles, for example, made in Germany.

The economic war between a triumphant Germany and the United States could result only in a drastic lowering of the American standard of living and a heavy increase in hours of work, together with reduction in rates of real income, for every worker for salary or wages.

Whatever the course, a triumphant Germany would be able to extract, directly or indirectly, a terrific price from this country. And a hungry, war-deprived Germany would inevitably seek, from this country, recompense for the sacrifices made for victory.

It is not a pleasant outlook and provides one more reason, if any were needed, why we should strain every resource to send utmost aid to Britain, the bulwark between us and Hitler's schemes for world domination.

Spring Boom Coming

That a national wave of prosperity amounting to the proportions of a real boom is due by next spring, is the consensus of opinion among observers of the political, economic and industrial scenes in this country.

Washington reports that, with the rapid pouring out of orders in connection with the national defense program, the existing industrial plant will soon be working at full capacity. In some areas, in fact, it has already reached that stage.

New plant construction is going ahead fast, though the real mass production thus to be brought about cannot be expected for another year.

It must be remembered, however, that many manufacturers have gone ahead with building, even without definite contracts and largely because of patriotic motives. Thus many plants are already in course of construction and should reduce that estimate of one year's delay drastically.

In addition to the defense orders from this government, Britain will undoubtedly continue pouring in orders for planes and guns and other war materials, as long as she fights. And, even in the unlikely contingency that Hitler defeats and crushes Britain, it is to be presumed that this government would immediately take over all unfilled orders for Britain. Certainly, such a Hitler victory would make our own peril much greater and more imminent.

Thus there seems no reason why this country should not be working to national capacity next year, with the general prosperity that such a condition cannot fail to bring.

It would be the part of wisdom if all of us paused for a little while to remember the insanity of those other boom years, the late 'twenties, and resolve that never again will any of us indulge in such an orgy of financial dissipation.

Our hit writers have been slow to celebrate the new national effort in song, as there appears to be no way to rhyme "rearmament" with "moon."

He Deserves the V. C.

The Victoria Cross is the most valued award a British soldier, of any rank, can win. It is a little metal cross and a tiny ribbon, given "for valor only." It is given only for extreme valor in the presence of the enemy.

It shouldn't be against those restrictions to award a V. C. to Lieutenant R. Davies, of the Royal Canadian Engineers. For the deed he accomplished, within the shadow of St. Paul's cathedral was surely as valorous as any in the history of modern man.

The fact that his heroism took place in the heart of London does not mean, today, it was not "in the presence of the enemy." For all London is the battlefield in this most horrible of wars, every Londoner, soldier or civilian, is constantly facing the enemy and all are, in the truest sense, soldiers. And the deeds of valor performed by uniformed men and civilians alike, by men and women and children, are uncounted.

Lieutenant Davies was in command of the unit of army engineers charged with the duty of removing, safely, a delayed action bomb the Germans had dropped beside St. Paul's. It weighed a ton and, if it exploded, St. Paul's would undoubtedly have collapsed.

The bomb had buried itself 27 feet deep in the ground. It was necessary to place intricate tackle around it, to haul it out. Lieutenant Davies would not permit any of his men to descend that 27-foot hole. He went down himself. The tackle slipped twice, dropping the bomb back in its hole. Finally it was hauled out and placed upon a truck.

Lieutenant Davies drove that truck himself, at full speed, through miles of London streets, to a marsh where it was, finally, detonated in harmless safety.

And there wasn't a moment of all the hours required for the complete operation, when the lieutenant, his men, or anyone knew that the bomb would not explode. Death in any form is not welcome, but it is particularly hideous beside an exploding ton-bomb—there wouldn't be anything at all left of any man so slain. He would be, literally, wiped from human knowledge.

Lieutenant Davies deserves the V. C. if ever man did.

The windiest spot in the United States has been found, and constant readers of the Congressional Record who thought they knew can guess again.

In the world of sport, they begin to say of the Brooklyn Nets that they have a mathematical chance. But then they said that of France.

War is dreadful. In the twinkling of an eye it razes the historic structure that has stood up under years of tourists scratching their names thereon.

What does anyone hear these days of the heavily armored train, presented by Adolf to his chum, Benito (Live Dangerously!) Mussolini?

NATIONAL GUARD CALL

"Reassuring to the country" is the President's mobilization of National Guard units, says the CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER, which observes that the initial calling of "only 60,000" of the Guard's personnel of 400,000 "shows good judgment." On the other hand, Albany's KNICKERBOCKER NEWS asks, "Is the President rushing his call for the guardsmen?" and sees, as unfortunate, the fact that Roosevelt "is also the Democratic candidate for re-election."

"The coming year . . . should be of inestimable value," says THE DALLAS NEWS, adding the afterthought, "In nearly every state in the union, the National Guard is in politics, state politics and internal politics. Mobilization offers a fine opportunity to toss politics out of the window and secure results on merit."

Concerning the mobilization order, however, politics get scant mention in the nation's newspapers. The changing times is stressed by the BIRMINGHAM NEWS, which declares, "the United States is but coming closer to the pattern of life which has prevailed for many years in war-torn Europe." and in line with this, the PORTLAND OREGONIAN asserts, "It is vitally necessary that our sons shall be trained for defense." The NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE sees "a whole new military system, able to deal with the lightning war which Hitler has released upon the world, has to be created."

Meanwhile, the question of home defense is one that needs an answer; the PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER suggests, for "guardsmen may be removed to distant points at any time." The Inquirer urges prompt congressional action on the proposals of New York's Governor Lehman "for prompt organization of home defense regiments." Echoing the necessity of such enactments is the WASHINGTON POST, which asserts the "guard units may be expected to become more fully integrated into one federal defense system" . . . and . . . "it may be necessary to organize some kind of home defense units."

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

TREASURY TAX CHIEF A LIKABLE IRISHMAN WAS HINGTON, Sept. 16.—One of the few persons in the country who can explain with some clarity the multiple versions of the house and senate excess profits tax bill is John Lawrence Sullivan, assistant of the Treasury. For almost a year Sullivan has been in charge of taxes, and as another new tax law is being written, it is appropriate to know a little more about him.

HODGE-PODGE OF LAW As a rule, tax experts are inclined to be pretty pompous fellows, apparently born to the belief that the taxpayer should never understand how his tax is computed. Sullivan would be the last man to claim an expert's title. As his name suggests, he is an agreeable Irishman, brought to the government a year ago from a prosperous New Hampshire law practice. He is an able lawyer, has a good grasp of tax principle, with an ability of clear expression unusual to those who dabble in the mysteries of tax law.

To anyone who follows tax legislation at all, two points are very clear. First, Sullivan's job is not an easy one. He succeeded to a place previously held by the left-winger, Herman Oliphant; the middle-of-the-roader, Roswell Magill, and the more conservative John W. Hanes. For a good many years, neither the executive nor the legislative branch of the government has had an integrated policy. For a time the Treasury and the White House seemed to look to the stars for inspiration. Then, too, practically every member of the two congressional committees considers himself an authority. The result has been a weird collection of law, rewritten at each session of congress in response to the pressure of events.

Second, the administration should take its full share of the blame for the present lamentable state of the tax bills. But Sullivan cannot personally be blamed, for he has worked under great handicaps. One was the completely unexpected demand from the President for an immediate law, and the White House refusal to follow through on the Treasury program. The Treasury bill hit a snag in the house ways and means committee, where Chairman Robert Doughton and other Democrats were in a fury. Colin Stam, the committee's expert, had some strange ideas of his own. And finally after the house passed its bill in two hours it left even the leaders did not understand, the senate committee refused to accept either the house or Treasury program.

IRISH BOY IN POLITICS After two months of being buffeted about in two congressional committees, Sullivan no doubt would much prefer his law office in Manchester, N. H., to Washington. But, with all his difficulties, he has remained popular with both Republican and Democratic committee members, even though he has stuck to his theories. Fortunately he is an extremely likable person, with all the charm of the Irish and with 15 years of experience in rough-and-tumble politics.

His grandparents migrated from Ireland to settle in Manchester, where his father, Patrick Henry Sullivan, was personal counsel to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, who owns a newspaper there. Sullivan inherited a good law business, which he increased to the point where government service is a real financial sacrifice. He last worked at the age of 17. He later graduated from Dartmouth, and then from the Harvard Law School, attending at a time when such well-known New Dealers as Thomas Corcoran, James M. Laramie and Senator Claude Pepper were students. Strangely enough, he was not a friend of Corcoran's in law school, although he had a brief encounter with the brain-truster a few years before when he defeated him in a famous college debate.

Being Irish and a lawyer, it was natural for Sullivan to enter politics, and in 1928, when he was 29 years old, he was elected county solicitor. Three years later he was Alfred E. Smith's warmest supporter in New Hampshire, but in 1934, when he ran for governor, he was on board the Roosevelt bandwagon. He was elected the governorship in normally Republican New Hampshire by only 2,400 votes. In 1936 he was an active Roosevelt manager, carrying his devotion to the point of campaigning when he was in need of an operation. His chauffeur carried an ice pack and a map of the nearest hospitals during his speaking trips.

A year ago, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy Helvering, after an encounter with him on a tax case, recommended that he be hired by the government. He became one of Helvering's assistants, and in January, 1940, the President named him assistant secretary of the Treasury in charge of taxes. He has become one of the most respected and popular Treasury officials. But as Sullivan and every other tax official knows, until the administration and congress finally are forced to a sensible revision of all revenue law, not much improvement can be expected.

Purging Away The Dross.

In the 119th Psalm, Verse 119, there are the following words:

"Thou putt'st away all the wicked of the earth like dross. . . . Dross is the scum, the impurities, which fall away from metals when they are refined in the furnace. What is left is the pure metal, worthy of use in industry or in the arts."

If the raw metal that goes into the furnace could speak, it is to be presumed it would hate the fierce heat which is necessary to its purification. It is to be presumed it would resist, to the utmost, going into that furnace, even though it knew it would come out perfect metal, instead of the trash-impregnated scrap it is before.

And it seems to me there is a direct analogy between the story of the scrap that goes into the great blast furnace, and the human race of today.

Certainly the agony which Nazidom has brought upon Europe is comparable to the fierce, agonizing heat of that furnace. Certainly the nations which have fallen before that terrific Nazi power have melted and dissolved like scrap metal in the fire. And certainly, in all those nations, there was scum, dross, which must be burned away before they can again arise, purified, to carry on the destiny for which they were created.

Rottenness Of France

In country after country that fell before the Hitler assault, it was revealed that traitors, "Quislings," Fifth Columnists had done their vicious work in advance; they had so rotted the foundations of the nation that it fell before the first fierce blow. It is slowly being revealed that the thing which brought about the downfall of France was a decay that set in years ago. There were the traitors in France, too, but it was a sort of moral decay that began even before the rise of Hitler. The sort of decay that made the rich ready for any sacrifice so long as they remained rich, and the poor willing to give all so long as they could be well fed, well clothed and with plenty of recreation time while giving it.

These nations are suffering, today, in the fire of the furnace. The dross is coming to the surface, and when that day comes when Fate shall once again demand them fit for national freedom, they will be better nations, purified by suffering and sacrifice.

And In Britain.

The fire has burned, and is burning, fiercely in Britain. But already the world witnesses the falling away of the dross there, and when that day comes when the men of Britain that is emerging from the ordeal is of a fineness to arouse the admiration of a universe.

It may be that Fate has ordained this period of trial, that a finer and a stronger and a greater British people than ever before shall emerge.

And don't overlook the fact that, while Nazi bombs are wrecking some of London's buildings, and the hundreds of those buildings needed razing, anyway. It's tough on the East End, for instance, and all the world sends sympathy to the poor folks who have died, been wounded or have seen their little homes smashed to powder. But, honestly, quite large areas in that section have needed eradication for years. Perhaps, after the horror has passed and the sound of bombs is but memory, there'll be a rebuilding so fine that future generations will almost be willing to give thanks to the Nazi bombers.

A sort of drastic, but needed, slum-clearance project, as it were.

And, for Germany.

Who can doubt that Nazi Germany has brought upon herself the ruin she has revealed in recent years, needs and must receive a burning that shall make those inflicted upon other nations seem as nothing.

After all, it will take a long, hot fire to burn out the rottenness in a country which could slay and torture and persecute the Jews as Germany has done.

It will take much suffering to cleanse the German mind of such Nazi villainies as the degradation of women into mere brood animals. It will take a lot of German deaths to erase the stains upon a nation's history that was placed when Rotterdam was so heartlessly and needlessly bombed.

It will take a fiery bath of blood to wipe out the horror of indiscriminate sinkings of passenger ships, loaded with women and children, at sea. It will take a lot of atonement for a nation that deliberately set fire to the floating oil, around a bombed steamer, so that the hundreds of fugitives in the water might burn to death.

Who can doubt that the fires are being made hot for Germany?

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Wednesday, September 17, 1890: "Cordele is the phenomenal city of southwest Georgia. Everything is on a rush there."

Fete Held Despite War

Gubbio, Italy, celebrated its traditional festival of the "Ceri" despite the tumult of war. The festival is of ancient origin and is believed to date back to 1151 when, through the miraculous intervention of Saint Ubaldo, patron of the town, Gubbio, defeated the combined forces of 13 towns united against her. The festival featured an unusual race.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Crossroads Of Destiny? NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—As I look at it, this presidential election is one of those crossroads of destiny that the cartoonists draw, with George Spelvin, the average American, depicted as a puzzled little guy with question marks shooting out of his hat.

Only this time I think we really are at the crossroads and that down yonder way, beyond a stretch bordered by social and political ice cream trees and dandy houses as far as the first bend, the road hocks off to a strange and ugly land with mountains of debt piled to the sky, like those elephant-colored Rockies in the west, and nothing but tin shacks in the valleys which are bare and deeply shadowed by the range.

Remembering how arrogantly the humble, hand-washing bleeding hearts of the New Deal spoke of their "mandate" after 1936, interpreting the election returns as popular permission to load the supreme court with political ringers and repudiate the rights of minorities and property, I apprehend that they will try to finish the job if they are given four years more. The people were not quite softened up for it this term, but they are head-weary now and, given four years more, the New Deal would really bang things around.

Meaning of Democracy.

You don't hear so much about it now because it would be bad propaganda toward election time, but two years ago there was a lot of talk from over there on the left about the people's right to change their form of government any time. I think this talk would be revived soon after election if Mr. Roosevelt were returned to office with another of those "mandates" and that this time they would claim to have struck down the people and to make some change. They used to say they were just trying to make democracy work and I now take them at the word, but now I better understand what they mean by "democracy." Most of us think it means freedom, but they mean a mental reservation and they take advantage of the carelessness of our thinking. When they say "democracy" they have in mind the right of a majority to abrogate the rights of the minority and even to vote away its own rights by conferring a "mandate" or some ambiguous approval on a group who will then read false meanings into the returns, amounting, in their view, to a "mandate."

I don't trust tricky people and I am denying that this administration, from the President down, has been tricky all the way. I think one explanation of Wendell Willkie's ineffectiveness as a campaigner up to date, has been his adherence to the old rules of controversy.

Crooks To Be Sorry.

There are a lot of crooks in the Social - Democratic lineup now who think they are playing smart politics. They are counting on their strength to Mr. Roosevelt, but the greater their success the sorrier they will be in the long run. After election and for as long a time as he might need them Mr. Roosevelt would let them be, because a man with a "mandate" always has needs of thieves, roughnecks and other incorrigibles to do his dirty work while he is organizing his own strength. But, thanks in part to their own resourceful knavery, these hoodlum political leaders find themselves in the power of the administration after election and the Department of Justice would be able to mash them as you would step on a bug. The Department of Justice never was as political as it is today but, given a "mandate," it would grow.

In this campaign we hear nothing of any surprises which the New Deal expects to break out after election if Mr. Roosevelt is returned. They never have revealed their surprises in campaign time. They get their "mandate" first and then reveal what they have in mind.

Over in Sweden or Norway a few years ago there was a strange, suicidal migration of a race of rodents which, on an instant notion, went hell-bent across country in a straight line in the manner of some tribes of ants which suddenly go nuts and go away from where they are, climbing all obstacles and losing themselves in floods until the survivors, if any, arrive at a certain spot. These Scandinavian rodents just kept on jamming without looking where they were going until the whole crazy pack of them hopped off a fjord into the sea.

Some people think maybe the sunspots are doing us dirt. It certainly is something.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

CHATSWORTH ROAD Perhaps, if you are not driving too fast for looking, you might notice the old brick house, standing high on a hill to the right, and the old brick building seen through the trees to the left.

This is on the 12 miles of road between Chatsworth and Dalton. The old house and the roofs seen through the trees are not far out of Chatsworth, not more than two miles, I'd say, as one drives toward Dalton.

The roofs to the left are the town of Spring Place, once the county seat of Murray county. The house to the right is the old home of Joseph Vann, half-breed chief of the Cherokees.

There is a drive to the right by the old house on the hill, where a new road is being cut. You will have to turn in there and park and walk up the back way to the house.

It dreams there on the hill, its old bricks, hand-made by slaves at Savannah more than a century ago, holding the warm sun; its wide windows shutterless.

There are so many places in Georgia where great human dramas were enacted; so many places where there were scenes of human sorrow, triumph and despair; and most of them go unnoticed as the cars whir by; as the tourists hurry on; as the big trucks go swiftly by.

I would like to have seen it any day a little more than 100 years ago, in the years immediately after 1802. I would like to have seen it with Chief Vann and his Cherokee wife; with the Indian braves lounging about the trading post near by; with the Moravian missionaries going about between the house and their school in the village across the way.

AND ESPECIALLY— I would like to have seen it one day when the militia of Georgia, the young men and the old ones, in their homespun suits and the buckskin shirts and coonskin caps, leaned their rifles against the walls and watched a trial.

There was a song writer on trial. He was not well known. He had written a song called "Home, Sweet Home," but few people knew him or the song.

The State of Georgia had arrested him on charges of sedition and of seeking to incite the Indians to violence. For 12 days he had been imprisoned in a log house near the big house. This day he was brought to trial.

They sat about listening. The provost marshal was in charge. On the veranda there lounged some of the Indians, some of the Moravians and many of the soldiers.

John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," testified he was in Georgia merely to study the legends and the traditions of the Cherokee nation. That said nation even then was nearing its tragic climax, the loss of its lands and exile. No one knew it then. Chief Vann watched.

He had come there years before. It was said that in the wilderness of North Carolina he was wanted for murder. But the Moravian missionaries liked him. He had prospered as a trader. He had built the great brick house. He sent his children to the Moravian school in the valley. He was a great influence for Christianity among the Indians. No one bothered the Moravian missionaries.

They heard the evidence, deliberated, and let him go free to write more songs and gather his legends.

The Indians went away. The settlers slouched off to their homes. Life went on about the trading post, the house, the village. The house is there yet. An addition has been made at the back. But the old hanging stairway still is sound; the old fireplaces are good; the windows are the same. There is hand-carving about the mantels. But that is all. Tenant farmers occupy it, taking a sort of pride in its story.

Across the way the town of Spring Place is quiet, too. Its population is less than 200. The old school building which the Moravians built, and which later was the courthouse, again is a school.

The road goes between the village and the old house. The Indians, the Moravians, and Old Chief Vann are long since gone, taking the "Trail of Tears," one of the dark chapters in Georgia's history and in any history of man's inhumanity to man.

AND IN THE FIELDS— The road from Dalton to Chatsworth, and on down toward Cartersville, is I think, the most serenely beautiful in the state. It is not breathtaking, but it has a charm which no other stretch of road possesses. The Cohutta mountains, the fields, the streams, the forests, and the good farm land give it a real character. There are no dreadful signposts; no stretches of ugly "Bar-B-Cue" shacks. It is a most satisfactory road.

Sunday afternoon one saw the hay stacked in the fields, fresh cut and fragrant. One could go close and smell the heat of summer still in the grasses. A few bees buzzed about, and summer, reluctant to go, nevertheless was giving way to the approach of autumn. The harvest season was, one could see, near at hand. The leaves of the corn stalks are drying; the grasses are browning. The smell of autumn was coming into the air.

The first purple haze of autumn was over the peaks of the Cohutta mountains; the cattle in the fields hunted for green spots of pasture.

There just isn't another road as satisfactory as the one which begins to be good a few miles out of Cartersville and, finally, goes along with the mountains always in view and turns, at last, into the road which goes by the old brick house and the village to be seen through the trees.

A Benedict Arnold Is No More Dangerous Than a Loyal Officer Afraid To Act

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

As this is written, officials and earnest citizens in all parts of America are discussing the advisability of delivering some of our World War destroyers to England.

The argument in favor of it is that such ships would do more than anything else to insure England against invasion and starvation. The argument against it is that such aid to England would give Hitler sufficient reason to make war upon us.

This latter argument no longer makes sense. It is equivalent to saying we should not risk the wrath of a tough neighbor by kicking his dog, although we have already kicked it often and hard. We have sold England shiploads of rifles, field guns and ammunition from our own military stores. We have of necessity formed the equivalent of an offensive and defensive alliance with Canada, and to join a nation at war is to join the war.

In plain language, we have already stuck our necks out as far as we can; and while the transfer of destroyers to England would undoubtedly enrage Hitler, it could not change his purpose concerning us, for we have already given him sufficient reason to attack us if he so desires.

Isn't it time for us to quit fooling ourselves and face facts as they are? Isn't courageous and consistent action wiser and safer than indecision and pusillanimous dilly-dallying?

We are in grave danger or we are not. Our safety depends on England's survival, or it does not. If not, then conscription and two-ocean navy and all our military efforts are foolish and childish.

But if we are in terrible danger, and if the fall of England would expose us to a bloody and ruinous conflict against dreadful odds, then our present course is such criminal folly it seems utter madness.

Likes Frankness Of Most Folk Of This 1940

More than once I have commented on the increased frankness of the present generation, or generations, the lessening of pretense, the total lack of embarrassment under circumstances which, when I was growing up, would have meant utter humiliation. I like it. I once mentioned overhearing a conversation in our home when a daughter resided there. She had a "date." They thought of the pictures, but suddenly remembered a dance which promised more fun. The young man liked the idea but the matter of finances arose. He had heard the tickets were a dollar. He had a dollar—and a dime. If that meant a dollar each, no dance. If a dollar a couple, fine. He picked up the telephone. The rate was a dollar a couple. "Come on," he said. "Let's get going."

When I was 19 and earning about five bucks a week I was above mentioning sordid money in the presence of a fair charmer. If I was broke, which I usually was, I'd avoid the feminine sex. And I'd act—as far as possible—as though a few thousands meant nothing in my life. Which, to be candid, it didn't. Neither did millions.

All of which leads up to an incident of one day last week. The mistress of the manor and I had dropped in for a cocktail at a home on the very swankiest road of Atlanta's suburbs. We were enjoying ourselves immensely with imported pate de foie gras and caviare, as we always do there. Time came to leave.

On Close Rations.

"Stay and have some dinner with us," invited the hostess. "That is, if we have anything to eat. I'll see."

I accepted eagerly. "Fine," says I. "My wife says there's nothing left in our icebox and I must take her out to dinner and my total liquid wealth consists of 85 cents." Which was all too true.

"Don't accept too quickly," continued the hostess. "Let me ask the cook what we have in sight."

She returned with the glad news that the larger contained a fair amount of soup and two fish. Not extra large fish but enough for four portions. And some chocolate cake and the makings of coffee.

"But you tell Mr. Paul not to ask for more butter," urged the cook. "There's just enough butter to go 'round."

So we ate the soup and the fish and the chocolate cake and everybody had plenty and was happy. Mr. Paul forgot and did ask for more butter and received a verbal box on the ears.

In my mother's day she would have swooned and sunk lifeless on the Brussels carpet before she would have let casual guests assume the pantry wasn't bursting with enough costly viands to feed a battalion. It never was, but she'd have died before admitting it.

I like the modern way better.

Dahlias or Dogs?

I am inquiring around for somebody who can help me train pups—or persuade chipmunks to go somewhere else.

I like chipmunks, just as I like squirrels and thrushes and mockingbirds and jaybirds—no, I'll take back the jaybirds. They chase everything else off the place.

Our year-old dachshund pups, Ding and Dong, are locked up in their private yard and bungalow all day and night. It is my custom and pleasure on reaching home in the afternoon to don indestructible clothes, release them from captivity and have a romp with them for an hour or so.

That has been fine, up to now. Ding would jump into my lap and fight off any attempt of Dong's to gain that fortress. If Dong got there first, then Ding was out of luck.

But recently the twins have been in accord. They have discovered a chipmunk sequestered beneath the image of a boy riding a dolphin, sculptured by Steffen Thomas, and bestowed upon the mistress of the manor in acknowledgment of an exceptionally fine dinner of ham—by grace of friends in Brooks county—and instead of seeking my society and companionship they devote their time and energy to digging for that chipmunk.

Determination

They have excavated a hole some 12 inches in diameter and at this writing, 32 inches deep. I have an idea the chipmunk has gathered up his household treasures and moved but I can't convince Ding and Dong of that. They're going to get that chipmunk if they have to chase him to open air Manchuria. And in the meantime they are destroying ferns which look just like ferns to me but which the mistress of the manor values at something like a hundred thousand bucks. (Tax assessors, please don't let that get into the records.)

I like dogs. I like squirrels. I'd like chipmunks if they'd let me get close enough. But I can't get terrifically aroused over ferns.

Would any reader desire to purchase 12 feet of ferns? Or two energetic dachshund pups? Or two chipmunks? In the last case delivery is not guaranteed. Come and get him—or her—or them. Furnish your own steam shovel or dynamite. Or both.

Minnesota and Montana Increase in Population

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The Census Bureau said today that in the last 10 years, Minnesota increased in population 8.7 per cent, or 221,943 persons, to a total of 2,785,896 and that Montana had a gain of 3.1 per cent, or 16,530 persons, to 554,136.

A corrected total also was given for Oklahoma because the population of McCurtain county was reported originally at 45,945, and should have been 41,316. The revision deepened the 10-year loss of the Sooner state to 66,232, and reduced its total to 2,329,808.

Government Drops Case Against Milk Dealers

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The government's anti-trust case against 45 individuals, corporations and associations in the milk industry was dismissed today.

The charges against them were dropped when a consent decree was entered enjoining them from fixing prices, controlling supplies and suppressing competition in the huge Chicago market.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

This is cotton-picking, cotton-ginning time in Georgia, and these recent beautiful days have been a great blessing to the farmers. I think I have never seen cotton as white and beautiful as it is this fall. I have been wondering how it looks farther down the state where the storm hit so heavily. If there was as much open cotton down there at the time of the storm as there is in upper Georgia at this time, there must have been much damage.

Every time I pass a field of open cotton and see the people out there picking, I want to stop the car and get out there with them; and every time I pass a gin and see the wagons waiting in the saws cutting the lint from the seed, I want to climb up on a wagon and help pull the cotton to the suction pipe.

There's something about it all that gets me. I love it. I am sorry for the person who was deprived of picking cotton, hauling it to the gin, and all that. Some of you will smile, I know, but that doesn't change my feeling at all.

I picked 416 pounds of cotton one day in my life, which I shall always cherish as one of the greatest days I shall ever hope to live. I shall never forget how tired I was that night, and how proud I was. A man is doing all right when he picks a bale of cotton a week. Ask any of them. Very well.

Now, for the best description of cotton, from the bloom to the loom, I give you this masterpiece by Dr. B. D. Gray, of College Park:

"It comes from a seed about the size and shape of a Boston bean, which when planted issues in a stem with two leaves about the size and shape of a possum's ear. They agree to part and spread, which they do, and presently there issues a bloom of creamy whiteness as fair as the forehead of a Dixie damsel, on which the sun looks with delight as a part of his product, and sinks below the western horizon, all fresh with fear lest he behold the beautiful object no more forever.

"Wandering through space for 12 hours of the night, the streaks of dawn herald his approach, ascending above the horizon, behold the lost enchantment, but now with features of sea-shelled tint, as he arises higher toward the zenith. No longer able to restrain the ardor of his passion, he smites her with his meridian rays and she blushes scarlet. The same course for the next day, and lo, robes of royal purple have succeeded the graces of yesterday.

"If this be the cotton bloom, what about its final product? Cotton, imprisoned within the bud, with the assistance of the sun, bursts forth, spreading Dixie with a mantle of whiteness challenging the glistening snow of the heights of Hermon. She flaps in every sail upon the seven seas, in every whirl of millions of automobiles, is the supreme factor in the economic life of the world, the greatest product growing out of the earth. It furnishes swaddling clothes for the child in the manger, a winding sheet for old age in the hour of death, and we are told that those who walk the streets of the Celestial City are clothed in white."

Ruth Hartsfield, 17, of College Park, left her home Sunday, September 8, after a family quarrel, Mrs. H. L. Whitehead reported, and has not been seen since.

Harold Sikes, 14, started out for the Hoke Smith Junior High School Monday morning, September 9, and has not returned home, H. H. Sikes reported. He said Harold had been seen in a sedan with two men later in the week. The Sikes live at 451 Crew street.

Secretary Hull Talks With Lothian, Casey

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP) Secretary Hull conferred at length today with Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, and Richard Casey, the Australian minister, on matters which Lothian said particularly concerned Australia.

The conference was believed to have dealt largely with Japan's moves in French Indo-China and their possible implications for Australia. There has been speculation also that the United States and Australia might form a defense agreement similar to that recently concluded with Canada.

New Comet Discovered By Harvard Observatory

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A new comet, which can be seen only a clear night with a powerful telescope, was reported today by Harvard observatory.

Located in the constellation Cygnus, it was found by L. E. Cunningham, a graduate student at the observatory, on a routine patrol plate photographed on the night of September 5.

Jobs in Executive Branch Of Government Increase

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP) The Civil Service Commission said today jobs in the executive branch of the government increased 12,822 during July. The total of 1,023,341 compared with the estimated World War peak of 917,000.

Wilcox County Residents Find News Travels

'Fan Mail' Received After Papers Print Stories About Them.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. ROCHELLE, Ga., Sept. 16.—Several Rochelle and Wilcox county residents who have had pieces in the paper about them recently are convinced that news really does travel fast and far.

General Grant, the Wilcox county Negro farmer who makes a side line of converting shucks from his corn crop into saleable articles said, "Since that story about my shuck rugs was in the Atlanta Constitution, I have received more orders than I can fill in several weeks, and others are coming in from all over the state."

M. A. Dix, who went hunting for huckleberries and thought he had found a nice juicy one only to have it turn out to be the button on a rattle snake's tail, said, "I have received letters from all over the country wanting to know if it really happened and what kind of feeling did I have."

Miss Velma Robinson, employee of the Wilcox county agent's office, declared, "Evidently the story about the boll weevil perching on the application blank for a party check and the farmer's comment 'Gosh, they've eaten up my cotton crop and now here's one to collect my subsidy check' must have traveled far and wide."

Miss Robinson has received numerous letters about the incident, one from an employee of the Flemington, Maine, farm agent's office giving a description of the operation of that office and wanting to know something of the activity in a Georgia farm agent's office.

J. D. Fitzgerald received a copy of the New York Sun referring to his story about a white leghorn hen adopting a cat and her kittens. The story first appeared in the Constitution.

And a Syracuse, N. Y., woman thinks Mrs. J. W. Mashburn's bantam rooster should be sent to England.

Catholic Leader Warns Of Military Anti-Christ

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—(AP) Discussions of religious topics were mingled today with reports on scientific developments as the University of Pennsylvania opened its bicentennial program, and an early speaker warned against what he called a "military anti-Christ."

The speaker was Dr. Jacques Maritain, of the Catholic Institution of Medieval Studies, Toronto, Canada. He did not identify the "anti-Christ."

RE-ELECT J. Frank Beck

Councilman 5th Ward

To the Citizens of Atlanta:

I am deeply grateful for the overwhelming expression of confidence which you gave me in the recent primary.

I received 10,226 votes as compared with the 4,891 votes of my opponent. However, it is necessary that I compete again in the runover.

I respectfully solicit your support in this election, to be held next Wednesday, September 18th.

Yours very respectfully,

J. Frank Beck,

Candidate for Council, Fifth Ward

PAY BANKHEAD HOMAGE—A pall of sorrow filled the house chamber yesterday as President Roosevelt and members of congress attended funeral services for the late Speaker William B. Bankhead, who had presided since 1936. On the rostrum, conducting the rites, is the house chaplain, the Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery. Seated below the rostrum, in front of the flower-banked casket, are (left to right) Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes, Attorney General Robert Jackson, Secretary of

(left to right) Senator George W. Norris, Senator Robert M. LaFollette Jr., Senator Pat Harrison, Senator Charles Andrews, and Senator James F. Byrnes. Sitting at the left end of the fourth row is Senator Hattie Caraway, with Senator George beside her. Behind the table, left of center aisle, is Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr., house minority leader. Members of the senate occupied front rows. Behind them were house colleagues of the late speaker. The galleries, to which admission was strictly limited, were packed. (Story on Page 1.)

British To Buy 6,000 Motors From Packard

U. S. Lets Contracts for $116,842,227 Worth of Airplanes.

DETROIT, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The $62,000,000 contract awarded the Packard Motor Car Company by the United States for 3,000 Rolls Royce Merlin type aircraft engines will be followed shortly by a $125,000,000 commitment on behalf of the British government for 6,000 of the motors and parts, it was learned in authoritative circles today.

In addition to this huge order, an official of the Packard company indicated that options have been taken for an additional 10,000 motors for the British government and 5,000 for the United States.

Meanwhile in Washington the War Department announced contracts for airplanes totaling $116,842,227, and for weapons, supplies and construction totaling $79,313,899.

The construction contracts included: Dunn Construction Co., Inc., and John S. Hodgson Company, Birmingham, Ala. (Wiedeman & Singleton, Atlanta, architect and engineer), a negotiated contract of $3,335,977 for construction at Fort McClellan, Anniston, Ala.

In Philadelphia the keel was laid at the Philadelphia navy yard for the United States navy's second 45,000-ton battleship, largest fighting vessels in the world, and former Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison declared:

"The building of this ship is the building of something to defend human rights."

Coca-Cola Advertising Expenses Told in Suit

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Expenditure by the Coca-Cola Company of Atlanta, Ga., of $102,751,657.30 for advertising between 1892 and 1940 was reported today by a company official testifying in an injunction suit against the Nehi Corporation of Columbus, Ga.

The Coca-Cola Company has asked the Delaware court of chancery for a permanent injunction restraining the Nehi Corporation from using the word "Cola" as part of the name of its beverages.

William Austin Landers, assistant secretary of the Coca-Cola Company, told Chancellor W. W. Harrington that the advertising expenditure was an attempt to make the United States, Canada and most foreign countries "Coca-Cola conscious."

Nazis Attack London From All Directions

Continued From First Page. figures, the raiders came smashing in from every direction last night spreading explosive and incendiary bombs everywhere.

Indicating the ferocity of the attack, one building alone in central London was wrecked by seven heavy explosions. The rain of shrapnel upon the streets was deadly.

Attacks Widespread. Other parts of England were under simultaneous heavy attack from the skies, including towns to the northeast, the midlands and southeast England where high explosives and incendiaries showered from the raiders.

At 12:10 o'clock this morning, four hours after the start of the attack, more and more bombers were sweeping in like clockwork, criss-crossing in a patchwork of death and destruction above low-scutting dark storm clouds that made the aid of the "archies" difficult.

The attack which started at 8:10 o'clock last night was the fifth of Monday but compared with it the others were mere feints.

"Invasion at Any Hour." Britain's war cabinet, it was stated on authority, believes that a German invasion "may come at any hour."

But neutral experts refused to share this alarm—although they admitted that the danger of invasion still prevails—and pointed to stormy weather over the English channel and the fact that the Royal Air Force appears to be in tact and striking stubbornly.

No Ordinary Attack. Within the United Press office just off Fleet street the roar of the bombs reached such volume at times that the clicking of teletype printers was drowned out and it seemed as though the next bomb could not come any closer without striking the building.

Londoners were quick to realize that this was no ordinary attack. They came stumbling out of their homes in all sorts of night clothing, some half-dressed and clutching pillows, to run for shelters.

The dull thunder of the biggest "archies" mingled with the staccato crack of the smaller ones as the raiders smashed through mesh-like curtains of steel thrown up all around London by scores upon scores of batteries.

Fast, Furious Shelling. Instead of spotty shell bursts there were "rivers" of fire in the sky, so fast and furious was the shelling.

London's new anti-aircraft defenses threw up their most savage attack yet heard in the heart of London and shrapnel fell like deadly rain from great purple, white and violet bursts in the sky.

"Archies" by the hundreds slammed away, filling the night sky with tons of whistling steel, and formed an unbroken circle of fire around London.

The raiders swept in against the fierce wall of fire after four daylight attacks which, because of bad weather, were, for the most part, a return to the Nazis' former hit-and-run tactics.

The havoc wrought by the RAF in the past 48 hours, especially against the "jumping off points" of Germany's invasion preparations across the channel, may have "seriously cramped" Hitler's plans, the government leader told the United Press.

A mounting wind filled the channel with tossing whitecaps, a cheering shift in the weather for Britons.

Briton 'Aims' Flaming Plane, Leaps as It Dives Into Nazis

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—One British Spitfire pilot used his flaming plane tonight as a projectile to bring down a German bomber, the press association reported.

At the height of the fighting over London, it said, the flyer shot down two or more Dornier bombers from a formation and flew away, only to find that the tail of his spitfire was literally spitting fire.

He headed back toward the German formation, took a "bead" on the nearest Dornier, and leaped clear just before the collision.

The Briton landed safely in the street of a southeast town, the press association said, while the Germans crashed to earth.

Willkie Warns Willkie Attack Of Third Term On Roosevelt 'Dictatorship' Flayed by Hull

Roosevelt Would Bring Totalitarian Rule to U. S., Nominee Says.

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Asserting that the "Battle of America" is in progress, Wendell L. Willkie contended today that President Roosevelt's re-election would bring totalitarian government to the United States before the third term ended.

The Republican presidential nominee, speaking in the city where he taught high school history in 1913-14, accused the administration of materially assisting Hitler "in his aggressive plans."

He voiced a denial "that Franklin Roosevelt—whatever his intentions—is the defender of democracy," and said:

"First, I charge that here in America he has strained our democratic institutions to the breaking point.

"If, because of some fine speeches about humanity, you return this administration to office, you will be serving under an American totalitarian government before the long third term is finished."

Man Being Held In Wife's Death

County police yesterday were investigating the Sunday night slaying of a Negro woman near Fairburn, in old Campbell county. Ray Hines, 21-year-old Negro, husband of the woman, is being held in Fulton Tower charged with murder. Deputy Sheriff L. M. Happy Throngs Pack Rich's at Gala Opening Crowd of 10,000 Turns Out; Style Show Pleases Guests.

Rich's threw a party for the town last night.

They did more than that. They threw a party for all this section of the country, and people came from everywhere, from towns 50 and 75 miles away, to look over the familiar old store that has had its face lifted and has grown tremendously to boot.

Like a bride in her new home, the Rich's folks tidied the place up with flowers, told the band to play, and threw the doors open wide.

About 10,000 There.

They expected maybe 5,000 people. They got, perhaps, twice that many and maybe a little more. When the crowd was at its height it taxed even the expanded capacity to hold them all, and in some of the new departments which folks most wanted to see, it looked like sale day at the lingerie counter in Rich's of yesterday.

Everybody was happy, though. They "Oh'd" and "Ah'd" and looked to their hearts' content and when they got tired of looking they sat down in the chairs that were scattered about and let their feet cool.

It was hard to tell where the most interest centered, for people were everywhere, in the amazingly beautiful new silver department, in the great new horseshoe that is exclusively for men, upstairs and down. The escalators bore a heavy load for two hours, and even timid old ladies, spurred by the gala spirit, rode the moving ramps without too much persuasion. Some of the visitors, in fact, spent the evening on them.

Serve Soft Drinks.

The water went off all over town when the party was at its height, and when it came on again the people made a rush for the drinking fountains. They stormed

PART OF THRONG—Here's just a part of the crowd which thronged Rich's last night for the big opening of the modernized and expanded store. They are gathered in the new men's department where a man's fashion show them so that Rich's helped out with one of those friendly gestures for which the store is known. They opened up the soda fountain and served soft drinks free to all who would come and get them.

There wasn't much speaking. Frank Neely, executive vice president, said a few words about the spirit of the founders of Rich's, and how the store today tried to carry on in their tradition of friendliness and fair dealing. Mayor Hartsfield said a few gracious words about the store that was not only a store but a citizen, and about the way Rich's in a sad time in the city's history, loaned the town the money to pay its employees and didn't charge any interest on the loan.

Then the show came on, parading the men's fashions of yesterday, the queer hats and suits and coats and whiskers Grandpa wore at sport, in business, and a-court-ing. These, of course, were contracted with men's garb of today.

The people got a big kick out of the show. In fact they got a big kick out of everything.

Gray Veterans Open Meeting In Milledgeville

Parade, Tour of Old Homes on Today's Program.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Sept. 16.

(P)—Georgia's few remaining veterans of the Confederate army opened their 47th annual convention tonight with a banquet in this city that was the state capital during the War Between the States.

The convention will continue through Wednesday. At the same time the city will be host to the state convention of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Ball Follows Banquet.
Tonight's banquet was held at the old executive mansion and was followed by a "Gone With the Wind" costume ball. The grand march was led by Dr. William Dancy of Savannah.

A highlight of the ball was the presentation to the mansion of a chair once used by President Woodrow Wilson.

It was given by Colonel Telford C. Cuyler, distinguished Georgian and historian, in honor of his father, the late Captain Henry H. Smith, of the Confederate army.

Parade Is Planned.
Joe A. Moore, of Milledgeville, was master of ceremonies at the banquet.

A parade, a visit to old homes here and numerous speeches are other events of the convention program.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall, who is judge advocate general, U. S. V., will deliver the principal address tomorrow.

Other speakers on the program include Mrs. Charles Tillman, Stewart Wooten and O. B. Burroughs Jr.

Cadets To Parade.
Immediately after a luncheon a parade will form in front of Ennis Hall at the Georgia State College for Women, convention headquarters, and proceed to the old Capitol building at the Georgia Military College.

The parade will be led by the G. M. C. band and will include the G. M. C. Battalion, Battery D, Georgia National Guard, Confederate veterans, Spanish-American War veterans, and members of patriotic and civic organizations.

Several planes will fly overhead. The S. C. V. program will be held Wednesday morning. Speakers include: Oliver B. Burroughs Jr., Augusta, state commander; the right Rev. H. J. Mikkell, Atlanta; O. M. Conn, Dr. William R. Dancy, Judge Gordon W. Chambers, McWhorter Milner, and the Rev. A. S. Uim.

Pressley To Head West End Group

C. E. Pressley, assistant solicitor general of Fulton county, last night was elected president of the West End Business Men's Association to succeed Frank G. (Tobe) Etheridge. The election was held at the first fall meeting of the group.

Other new officers are: Walter L. Richard, vice president; W. A. Moreland, secretary; Fred Collier, assistant secretary; F. Young Howell, treasurer; and Dr. M. A. Cooper, chaplain.

Members of the board of directors are Dr. C. R. Adams, Dr. A. C. Ayers, Edgar Schukraft, D. G. McNair, George Wilson, Charlie Brown, A. S. Matthews, T. D. Mann, and Etheridge.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(A.— Domestic railway loans and Latin American, Canadian and Austrian government issues tilted higher in the bond market today. Elsewhere, however, price changes were small, with gains and losses about evenly divided.

Transactions totaled $3,896,100, a 10 per cent increase in value, compared with $3,472,000 last Friday.

Reports of improved South American business and talk of plans to Latin American nations for trade purposes widened interest in southern hemisphere issues.

gainers included Argentina
Panama 5s, Rio Grande do Sul and Sao Paulo 7s.

RICH'S NEW STORE FOR MEN

has the fussiest tie buyer in the South

Tie manufacturers shiver in their boots when Rich's tie buyer arrives. A sixteenth of an inch too much in a stripe, a faintest suggestion of off-color in a red, a merest hint of gaudiness makes him take to his heels. Good taste is his first commandment, his alpha and his omega. That's why, in Rich's new Store for Men, you could pick any tie in the lot blindfolded—and emerge looking a credit to your taste.... It's just one of the things you'll like about this shining new store. Others will be the fluorescent light which gives you eternal daylight, the spaciousness, the shop-within-a-shop idea, the fresh country air (made by our own air-conditioning plant), the fact that everything you need, from tie to topcoat, may be purchased on one convenient floor.

RICH'S chooses Longchamps to give you good taste in your SATIN TIES

Ties that carry on, in America, the fine satin tie traditions of France. The heavy all-silk quality, the silk lining, the full-fold, hand-tailored construction. Superb neckwear for the man whose suits have a custom look. Deep colorings—maroons, browns, needle greens.

RICH'S chooses Drillard to give you good taste in your FOULARDS

Ties that carry on, in America, the fine foulard traditions of England—the subtle colorings, classic geometric and Paisley designs. In addition, Drillard foulards have a body to the silk that ordinary foulards never achieve.

Sally Forth

SAYS

Wiggins-Gibson Wedding To Attract Many Notables

By Sally Forth.

• • • THE PRESENCE of prominent personages in theatrical, musical, educational, and national circles will add brilliance to the wedding of Dorothy Wiggins, of Los Angeles, Cal., and Thomas Harris Gibson, of Los Angeles, formerly of Atlanta, which will be a brilliant social event of Sunday. The ceremony will take place at the Chapman Park Hotel Oratorio at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Penny Singleton, of Los Angeles, known to the public as "Blondie" of the cinema world; Reginald Denny and Eve Arden will be among the members of the movie colony present, in addition to Chancellor and Mrs. Harry Chase, of New York University; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hull, actor and movie star; Mrs. Horace MacMahon, Miss Louise Campbell, actress; William Daniel Steele, playwright and short-story writer, and Mrs. Steele; Dorothy Gordon, radio star, all of New York City; Arthur Bergh, composer and conductor, and Mrs. Bergh, of Beverly Hills, Cal.; Bishop and Mrs. W. Bertram Stevens, of Pasadena, and Lela Mae Stiles, of the White House, Washington, D. C.

This assemblage of notables, as well as many friends of the couple, will witness the impressive afternoon ceremony to be performed by Rev. David Farquharson.

Prior to and during the ceremony a program of organ music will be presented by E. Ernest Ballard. The groom-elect has selected for his best man William Schoeffler, of Los Angeles, and his groomsmen will include Guy Arthur Wiggins and Carlton Wiggins, brothers of the bride-elect, and Eugene Nesmith, of the cotton state. The lovely bride-elect has selected Mrs. William Schoeffler for her matron of honor and Miss Ernestine Gardner will be a bridesmaid.

Dorothy will be given in marriage by her father, Guy Wiggins, who, by the way, is one of the country's best-known artists.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Wiggins will entertain at an elaborate reception in the patio of the oratorio, which is the Latin word for chapel. The patio is naturally decorated with orange trees and flowering shrubs.

Tom and his future bride have planned a marvelous wedding trip to Mexico and upon their return they will reside in the attractive suburb of Los Angeles known as Fresno.

Tom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Bayne Gibson, of Atlanta, has lived on the California coast for several years, and friends of this former Atlantan look forward to the time when he and his bride will visit in this city.

• • • THE MIDDAY dinner party at which Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Irwin entertained Sunday at their home on Morningside drive took the form of a wedding anniversary celebration—not only for the hosts, but for their guests also.

Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Long, Mr. and Mrs. E. Y. Jackson and their young son, Leland, of this city, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Nettles Ferguson, of Decatur. A graceful arrangement of varicolored marigolds and gold cosmos centered the table.

The hosts observed their 12th wedding anniversary on September 5; the Longs were married six years ago on September 16; Mr. and Mrs. Jackson celebrated their fifth anniversary on September 8, and Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson observed their first year of marriage on September 12.

Lamour Pays Visit to Home Town To Raise Money for Flood Sufferers

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 16.—Dorothy Lamour spends 37 hours in an airplane, 15 hours in her home town, New Orleans, raises $7,000 for the flood sufferers in Louisiana, returns to Hollywood with the flu and a temperature of 102. Who said virtue is its own reward? Between sniffs, Dotty tells me that it is seven years since her last sight of New Orleans, that all her old school friends are married and have babies. Dotty sounded wistful. I have a hunch that she will soon say "yes" to Lawyer Greg Bautzer's plea for a speedy marriage.

Talking about babies and such, Janet Gaynor says she will definitely refrain from picture making until her son is one year old. After that she will return to work in leisurely fashion, doing one picture a year. . . . Barbara Stanwyck is receiving $500 a day for lending her Marwick horse ranch for the Jane Withers picture, "Golden Hoofs." The money is donated to charity.

I heard this story about Robert Taylor the other day: One of the boys in the Metro publicity department was sick and had to go to New York for some expensive medical treatment. Of all the stars he had publicized at Metro for the past five years, only Robert came forward with an offer to defray his expenses. Those Taylors are nice people.

George Brent says "isn't so about his supposed imminent elopement with Ann Sheridan. But everyone else here seems to be waiting for it to happen. Don't ask for my opinion. If I say "yes" it won't happen. And vice versa. Naturally, Warners would like them to marry. It would be a good tie-up for their soon-to-be released picture, "Honeymoon For Three." The third member of this triangle is the Warners' publicity department.

Ginger Rogers will lose her popularity with the press in Hollywood unless the press agent supposedly looking after her changes his tactics. This is the same lad who put a ring of red tape around Fred Astaire when he was at the studio (R. K. O.). No one was allowed to speak to Fred in those days without the permission of this press agent. And when you could get to Fred, you were given a list of questions that were taboo. After a while it was easier not to talk to Fred. Now the same thing is happening with Ginger. By the way, when Fred worked at Metro and more lately for Boris Morros, he was exceedingly easy to approach and willing to talk on any and every subject. And to think that for years I had thought of Fred as a stuffed shirt.

Tyrone Power and Basil Rathbone were fighting a duel to the death in "The Californian." Tyrone had to run his sword through Basil's heart. He lunged, slipped and came away with Rathbone's toupee! . . . Jack Oakie's nickname while he was caricaturing Mussolini in "The Great Dictator" was "The Great Dictator." Oakie has received many threatening letters from Germans and Italians as an aftermath to the role. The manager of a famous Italian restaurant in Hollywood has warned Jack to stay away. "They'll poison me if I go there," Jack told me. The Chaplin picture, incidentally, will not be ready for the September 16 release date. It appears more likely to be October 1.

Gene Markey refers to Joan Bennett, his first wife, as "My best friend." But he isn't on talking terms with his second wife, Hedy Lamarr. . . . Dennis Morgan, Ginger Rogers' leading man in "Kitty Foyle," is billed as Stanley Morner, his real name, in his home-town, Milwaukee. . . . Katherine Hepburn has left Hollywood, which means that Miriam Hopkins can return to the former John Gilbert mansion, which she rented to Miss Hepburn. Miriam wants to sell the place, which is expensive to run. I gather that Miriam is hard-up for ready cash, although she owns a lot of real estate.

Overheard at Paramount. Five-year-old Carolyn Lee asks Madeleine Carroll, very seriously, "Mama, would you say that I have sex appeal?"

Mary Jane Has Sound View of Cries

Girls, Learn The Meaning Of Awareness

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Girls:

You who have written me pitiful letters asking why you haven't any boy friends, asking how you can make boy friends, here's my answer: Last night I listened to a couple of collegiates discussing what sorts of girls they liked and why. "Give me a good dancer," said the first one, "one that will stay off my white shoes. And I don't want her to be dressed so conspicuously that the chaperones whisper about her and the stage look at her as if she were a freak. I want her to look at me as if she'd forgotten there was any other guy on the floor. That flatters me and I can talk my head off. Then all she has to do is listen and follow where I lead."

"Dancing takes care of night dates but a girl has to be good in some daytime games too, and she has to know something about collegiate sports. I took a girl to our big football game last fall and she asked so many dumb questions I was ashamed for her. I signed off that evening."

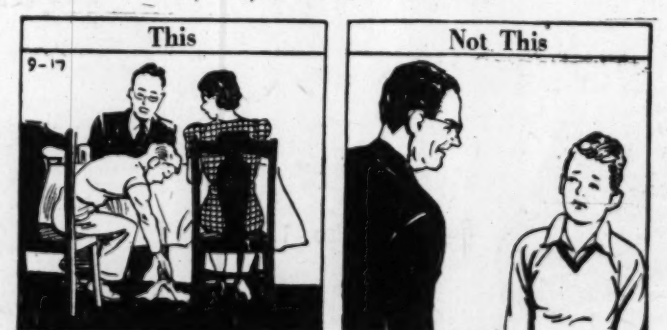

Said number two: "I agree with that but the girl I like best isn't a particularly good dancer. I guess you'd call her sort of dumb. She looks up at me with those big blue eyes, a grin stretching from ear to ear, and I feel so easy and comfortable I want to sit down by her and never get up. She doesn't talk much but she laughs all the time. She seems to think everything I say is funny."

Girls, if you were born without magic you must strive to please and here are some cues: Do you know what awareness is? Then be aware of something beyond your disappointment that you haven't gone over in a big way. Aware of your best points and of the best way of bringing them out; aware of the styles in makeup and clothes; aware of the boys and what they are doing; aware of the popular girls and the way they achieve popularity; aware of the sports they are interested in. And if you are aware you will discover that the most flattering attention a girl can give a boy is listening intently when he talks, laughing gaily when he tries to be funny, making him feel that you are keenly aware of him.

Then if you fail to make friends and have dates, go to the movies with your family, have fun with your girl friends. Don't let yourself stay at home to grieve.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Father: "Bill, please pick up mother's napkin. It is the courteous thing for men to pick up the things women and girls drop, you know, and it's just as well to get the habit at home."

Son: "You certainly are a rude boy. When Mrs. Jones was here, you let her pick up the magazine she dropped with you standing right there by it. When will you ever learn?"

Children do not acquire habits of courtesy by talking about them; as with other habits, they grow through practice.

For your fall entertainments, serve attractive trays of tidbits, such as these.

Tasty Biscuit Appetizers Add New Note; In Demand for Cool Weather Parties

By Sally Saver.

Now that the weather begins to have a snap, entertaining with afternoon get-togethers and cocktail parties becomes more appealing and new ideas for "eats" must be as keen as the fall air. You'll be wanting something light enough not to interfere with more substantial food later on and yet as tasty and appetizing as the first bite of a Thanksgiving dinner. Small canapés, or teasers made of tiny biscuits, jolly tidbits to make everyone feel gay, are just the thing to serve. And besides coming to your aid at parties, these tidbits are fine at the dinner table with chilled tomato juice or fruit juice.

The tiny biscuit appetizers may be baked in two appealing shapes either as tiny biscuits, split while hot and spread with chutney or deviled ham, or accordion-like made in three layers, with thin sausage slices between and set on end in small muffin pans to bake. To make them combine the following:

2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
3-4 teaspoon salt
2 to 4 tablespoons shortening
2-3 to 3-4 cup milk
Sausages
Chutney

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut or rub in shortening. Add milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on a lightly floured board and knead gently. Roll out to 1-4 inch thickness. Cut into one-inch rounds with small biscuit cutter.

Slice tiny cocktail sausages or other small highly seasoned sausages very thin. Cover a biscuit with sausage slices, then with another biscuit, more sausage and another sausage. Press together at one side, and set "sandwiches" on end in muffin pans. Bake in hot oven (400 F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Serve hot.

To make the tiny round biscuit appetizers, simply prick small rounds of biscuit dough with a fork. Bake on an ungreased baking sheet in hot oven (450 F.) 10 to 12 minutes. While still hot, break apart and place a teaspoonful of chutney between the layers. Serve hot.

Do the Conga, It's Society's Favorite

Dancing the Peabody—a merry little step that's gaining in popularity with good dancers everywhere.

Men like to date a girl who can keep up with the latest, who does not have to sit it out when the crowd is dancing smart steps. So make your dancing as up-to-the-minute as your newest party frock; teach yourself steps at home with footprint diagrams. It won't take long to learn the clever Peabody step. Keep your steps short and smooth and dance mostly on the balls of your feet. On Counts 3 AND you'll notice you do a kind of fast two-step.

THE WOMAN'S QUIZ

Q. How far back do birth records in the state of New Jersey go? How can I get a copy of my birth certificate, and what does it cost?

A. Birth records of New Jersey began in 1848 and are arranged by cities and counties. The general index for the entire state began in 1901. Write to the State Department of Health, Bureau of Vital Statistics, Trenton, N. J. Give them your full name, the place (city and county) and date of birth, your father's name and the maiden name of mother. Enclose a money order for one dollar.

Q. How can bookworms be exterminated? A. They usually thrive in damp, dark places. To eradicate them, store the books in light, airy places after fumigation with carbon disulphide. Pack the books in a tight chest or trunk and place about 1-2 teaspoonful of the carbon disulphide on a tin plate. The carbon disulphide, being heavier than air, will gradually settle to the bottom of the chest or trunk. Leave the books in the chest or trunk for about 24 hours. The tighter the chest or trunk, the better. Be careful not to breathe the fumes, as carbon disulphide is a deadly poison.

Miss Steerman and Mr. Nash Wed at Christian Church

The Peachtree Christian church formed the setting Saturday evening at 8 o'clock for the marriage of Miss Dorothy Unetta Steerman, lovely daughter of Mrs. Maude Steerman, and Walter Elsberry Nash, son of Mrs. Ovie Nash. Dr. Robert Burns performed the impressive ceremony and a program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Victor Clark, organist, and W. V. Nichols, vocalist.

The altar of the church was graced with two silver vases filled with white calla lilies. Cathedral candelabra holding burning white tapers completed the decorations. Groomsmen were Lawrence King and John Shelley.

Mrs. C. B. Moon, matron of honor, was gowned in a floor length model of gold tulle. She signed with a sweetheart neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. She carried a bouquet of purple asters and wore a cluster of varicolored asters in her hair.

Miss Billie Hancock and Mrs. J. F. North, sister of the bride, were bridesmaids. They were gowned in aquamarine tulle designed like that worn by the matron of honor. They carried pastel-colored flowers and wore clusters of matching flowers in their hair.

The radiant bride entered with her brother, T. J. Steerman, who gave her in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Harold Cheney. Mrs. Nash was gowned in white slipper satin made along princess lines. The bodice, which featured a basque waist, was designed with a sweetheart neckline and leg-of-mutton sleeves ending in points over the hands. Small self-covered buttons extended down the back to the full fan shaped train. Her veil of illusion was caught to her head with a halo of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of valley lilies and purple orchids.

Mrs. Steerman, mother of the bride, was gowned in soldier blue crepe with which she wore a matching hat and a spray of sweetheart roses and valley lilies. Mrs. Nash, mother of the groom, was gowned in black pebble crepe. Black accessories and a shoulder spray of gardenias completed her costume.

Mr. Nash and his bride left for a wedding trip to Miami and Cuba, and upon their return they will reside in this city, where the groom is affiliated in business.

Mrs. Nash chose for traveling a beige wool costume suit with which she wore Indian clay accessories and a shoulder spray of purple orchids.

Among out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Barnett, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Norris, Miss Margaret Barnett and Charles Barnett, of Charlotte, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ricketts, of Greenville, S. C., and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Johnson, of Chicago, Ill.

A series of interesting social affairs are being given for Mrs. William Candler Jr., the former Miss Laura McCarty, of Dalton, whose marriage was an important social event of the past summer.

Miss Ann Garrett gave a tea yesterday at the Piedmont Driving Club for her and on Friday Miss Martha Ewing has planned a tea.

On Wednesday Mrs. Candler will share honors with Mrs. Al Eldredge, of Miami, at the luncheon to be given by the latter's mother, Mrs. Howard Candler, at her home on Briarcliff road. Mrs. Eldredge is the former Miss Louisa Candler.

Mrs. H. W. Beers Jr. gives a small luncheon Friday at the Piedmont Driving Club for Mrs. Candler and Mrs. Eldredge. Saturday evening Dr. and Mrs. Carl Smith were hosts at an informal dinner party for Mr. and Mrs. Candler and on Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Walter Candler entertained at a dinner for their nephew and his bride.

Mrs. Dennis Leon Brown, who prior to her recent marriage was Miss Carimay Drinkard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Linton Drinkard, of Washington, Ga.

Coursey-Blout Marriage Rites

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 16.—At a quiet ceremony taking place at Boston University Methodist Chapel here Miss Elizabeth Lee Coursey, of Atlanta, Ga., became the bride of Byron Boyd Blout, Mount Pulaski, Ill., and Presque Isle, Maine, on September 12 at 11 o'clock. Rev. A. B. Lowstrutter performed the marriage in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends of the couple.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Coursey, of Atlanta, was unattended. She was stylishly gowned in a model of ocean blue wool crepe with which she wore a matching hat trimmed with a veil and brown accessories. She carried a skunk muff showered with orchids and valley lilies. She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Ray Maddocks.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for a wedding trip to Provincetown and Cape Cod, Mass. The bride donned for traveling a soldier blue wool costume suit, trimmed with beaver fur. A shoulder cluster of bronze orchids adorned her shoulder.

Upon their return they will reside at 107 Normal avenue in Presque Isle, where they will be attractive additions to the married contingent of society.

Alpha Gamma Deltas To Entertain Today

The Gamma Alpha chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta, University of Georgia, is sponsoring a social party at Lakemoore, this affair to complete the series of rush functions planned by the group for the summer.

Miss Grace Moore will be hostess and the club will feature a red, white and blue color motif. American flags, banners and a nautical theme will decorate the terrace walls. The patriotic idea will be carried out in a quiz session to be conducted by Misses Martha Verdi and Eloise Simpson, members of the undergraduate chapter at the University of Georgia.

Questions concerning patriotism will be asked each girl and a prize will be awarded the one giving the most correct answers. Also during the morning Miss Marie Waters will present a musical program playing members requested by the rushes.

Miss Ines Fornara complimented Miss Catherine Warren and her fiancé, Fritz Baumgartner, at a buffet supper on Saturday evening at her home. The hostess was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Miss Janie Fornara, and her mother, Mrs. A. M. Fornara.

Miss Warren was central figure at a miscellaneous snower given recently by Miss Sara Robinson at her home on Atlanta avenue.

A bridal quiz was held and Miss Rayanna Ellis won the prize, while Miss Mary Palmer won the contest where the guests embroidered their names in dish towels.

Miss Edwards, Florida Belle, Marries Lieut. Alvin Cooledge

ZELLWOOD, Fla., Sept. 16.—Attracting interest throughout the south is the announcement made today by Mrs. J. Stewart Edwards of the marriage of her sister, Miss Margaret Jean Edwards, of this city, to Lieutenant Alvin L. Cooledge, of Atlanta, Ga. The marriage of the prominent couple was a quiet event taking place on Monday at the First Christian church in Tampa, Fla. Rev. A. H. Wilson officiated in the presence of a small group of friends and relatives of the couple.

Mrs. Edwards was matron of honor for her sister. She was gowned in a white crepe dress fashioned along tailored lines. Mrs. J. T. Porter, of Ocala, Fla., was the bride's other attendant.

J. T. Porter, of Ocala, Fla., was best man for Lieutenant Cooledge and Lieutenant A. L. Zachry Jr., of Tampa and Atlanta, was the usher.

The attractive bride was gowned in a smart white eyelet embroidered silk model and a shoulder spray of jasmine and pink roses adorned her shoulder.

Mrs. Cooledge, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Edwards, was born and reared in Zellwood. She attended Cath-dral School for Girls in Orlando and Sullins College, in Virginia. She completed her education at National Park Seminary in Washington, D. C., and made her debut two years ago at the Apollo Ball which took place in Orlando. For the past year the bride has held the position as agent for Pirie and Laughlin Estates in Plymouth, Fla.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Cooledge, of Atlanta, Ga. Cooledge being the former Miss Winnie Ison. Miss Winnie Cooledge and A. H. Cooledge Jr., both of Atlanta, are the groom's sister and brother.

Lieutenant Cooledge was educated at Boys' High school in Atlanta and University of Georgia in Athens.

He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, Druid Hills Golf Club in Atlanta, and the National Quartermasters' Association. Lieutenant Cooledge, who has been stationed at McDill Field in Tampa since August 10, has been ordered to Philadelphia, Pa., where he will take a month's course at Quartermaster School.

After October 10, Lieutenant Cooledge and his bride will reside in Tampa, where they will be attractive additions to the young married contingent.

Crackers Come From Behind To Beat Chicks, 4-3, and Take Series

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

(Editor's Note: This is the 11th of a series of stories dealing with prospects of Southeastern conference football teams. Others will follow.)

'Gators Could Be Difficult

It was not long ago over in Starkville, Miss., that the writer and Coach Allyn McKeen, of State, were talking about 1940 prospects.

The writer suggested there might be 10 unusually good teams in the conference this season.

McKeen agreed and then asked, "What teams are you leaving out?"

"Well, Florida, for one," came the reply.

"Hold on there," broke in McKeen. "Florida may fool you. How many men did Florida lose from last year's team?"

A quick check-up revealed the 'Gators had lost only Clark Goff, an excellent tackle, from a team that ranked very high among the nation's defensive outfits.

"There's your answer," continued McKeen, whose State team meets Florida in the opening game. "Florida has a new coaching setup and may be a lot tougher offensively. They can't be any weaker defensively."

McKeen may be right. Florida didn't have much offense last year, but it did have a rock-ribbed defense. New Coach Tom Lieb, Notre Dame ace, has said Florida will be fancy this fall.

And the 'Gators may be fancy enough to make it tough for all opponents. With virtually no offense, the Saurians broke even last year, winning five, losing five and tying one.

Actually Two Losses

In addition to Captain Goff, one of the finest tackles in the conference, Florida unexpectedly has lost the right tackle, too. John Smith failed to return to school.

Goff is the chief loss, however. If Florida can replace him, there won't be anything to worry about EXCEPT a tough schedule.

Coach Tom Lieb has said, "An All-America schedule, but a team not of that caliber."

Florida has experience and reserves and a reputation for strong defensive play, but no team hardly could be expected to change from one system to another in 23 days and set the world on fire. The 'Gators held spring practice in the Pitt system, and now are hard at work learning the Notre Dame.

They can't be as polished or as poised as a number of their opponents. They're likely to be formation-conscious. That is, in the early games. Florida might come along and prove highly difficult in November.

Shifts in the Line

Catching up the slack, Florida has shifted Milton (Peanut) Hull, regular guard last season, and Benny Lane, sophomore center last year, to tackles in an effort to replace Goff and Smith. Other serviceable tackles are Tony Cianci and Ralph Kelson.

Florida will be strong at guards, where Mush Battista will pair with Chugby Ferrigno. Battista is one of the best of the conference guards. Parnell and Konetsky rank behind Battista, while Sauer and Godwin are in back of Ferrigno.

Florida also will be strong at center. Bill Robinson won a regular starting berth last season as a sophomore. He will be supported chiefly by Mike Bucha.

One of the best defensive ends last year was Forest Ferguson, six-foot 200-pounder. Ray Horner supports him at left end. John Piombo and Frank Smoak are capable right ends.

The 'Gators conceivably could be as strong defensively as last year, but there will be more thought of offense. A great offense still is the best defense.

Kerksieck Due To Face Vols In First Game

Jinx Poindexter's Pitching, Williams' Batting Beats Memphis.

By JACK TROY.

By virtue of one of their old-time ninth-inning rallies, the Crackers last night defeated Memphis, 4 to 3, in the pay-off game of the first round of the Shaugnessy play-off and tonight will meet Nashville in Sulphur Dell.

Dewey Williams, Cracker catcher, was the hero of the crucial Memphis game. Dewey not only caught a bang-up game, but his hitting provided the punch for a Cracker victory. Dewey hit a home run in the fifth and led off the ninth with a double off the signs. While Dewey was forced at home, nevertheless he sparked the rally that won.

Fans disagreed with Manager Paul Richards' strategy in the ninth. After Williams doubled, Richards removed Jinx Poindexter, who had pitched a stout-hearted game. Richards, himself, batted.

The fans still disagreed when Richards hit a short single to center and Williams was unable to advance. But the strategy was borne out when Anderson bunted and beat it out. For, while Williams was forced at the plate on the next play, a long outfield fly by Hafez enabled Manager Richards to slide home with the winning run.

When Richards made the momentous decision to hit, it was the first time he had been in a ball game since he hurt his shoulder at Nashville more than three weeks ago.

FANCY DUEL

The pay-off game was a tense one. It featured a fancy pitching duel between Wimp Willis and Jinx Poindexter, flashy fielding and clutch hitting. The game had everything. Each team came through with a double play in the pinch.

The Chicks grabbed a two-run lead before the Crackers ever scored. They scored runs in the first and second. Naylor's homer provided the second run.

It wasn't until the fourth that the Crackers crashed through. Williams hit a homer in the fifth for the second run.

The Chicks untied it in the sixth and the Crackers bounced back with the tying run in the eighth.

The pitching skill of Poindexter was expressed to an ultimate degree in the ninth when Veverka popped weakly to Hill. Piet fouled out hollowly to Williams and Barna also skied in anemic fashion to Hill.

FANS HOWL

Small wonder the fans howled when Richards pulled Poindexter for a pinch-hitter in the Crackers' half. But none can say he did the wrong thing. The Crackers won the ball game and earned the right to play the Texas League winner.

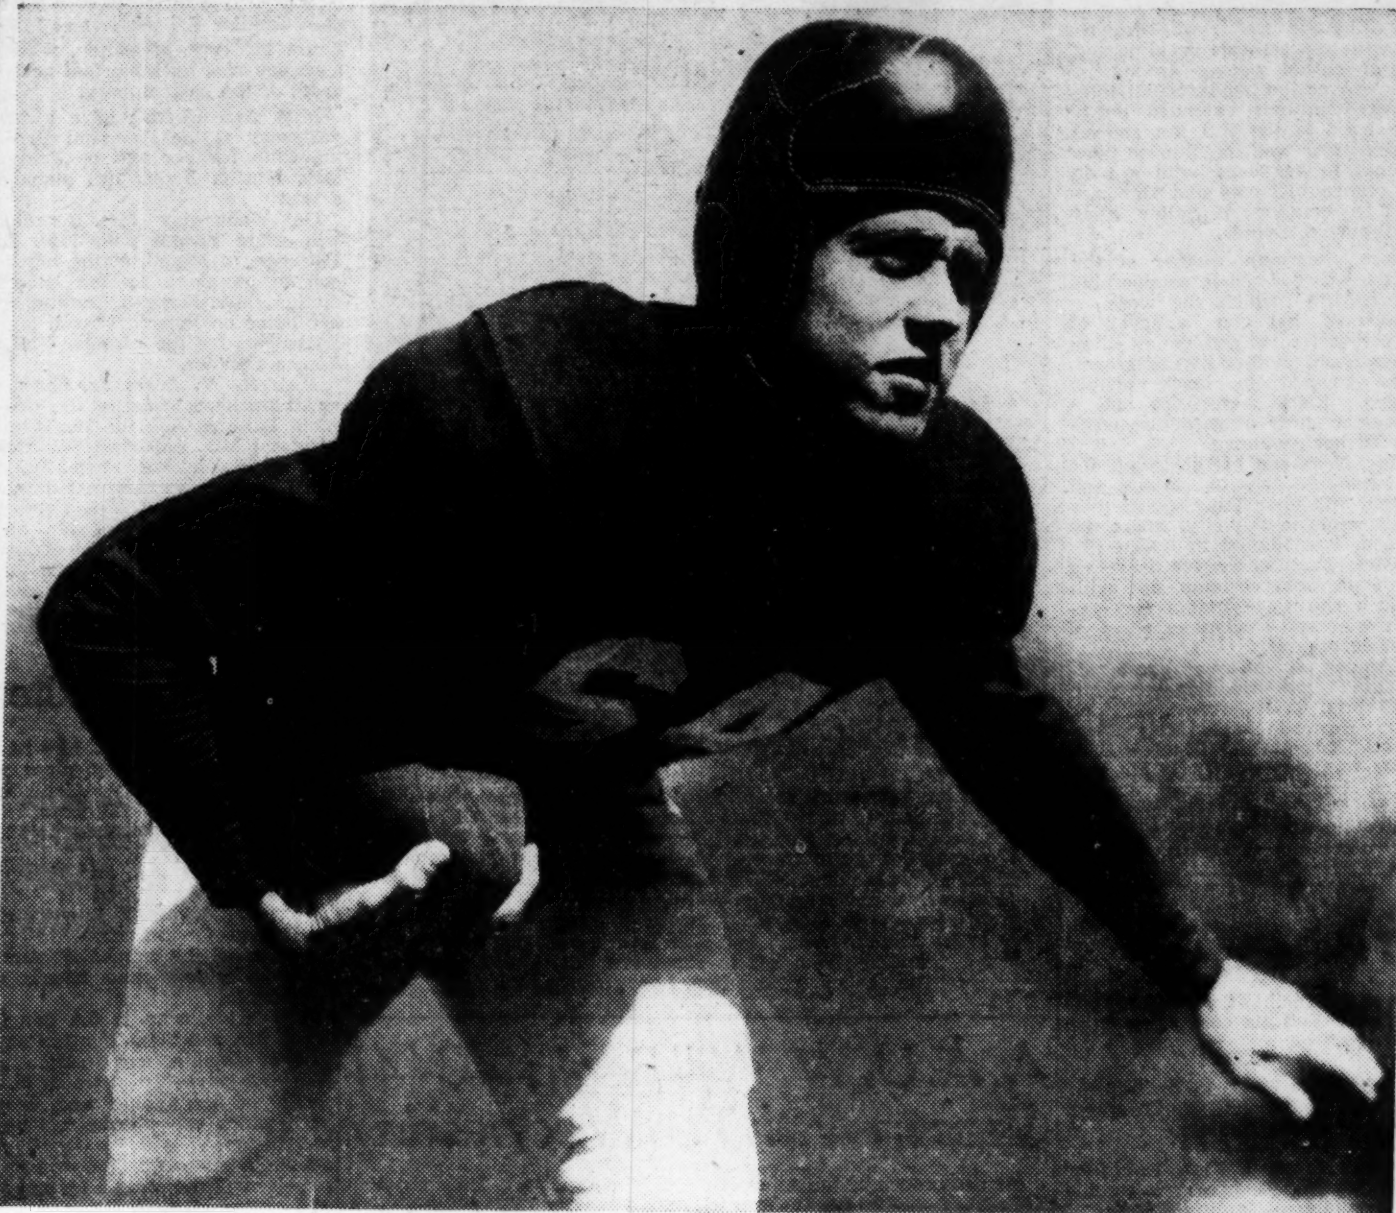

Poindexter gave the Chicks eight hits. Willis wound up by allowing 11. And Williams, as said, provided the big punch. He made three fine catches of very high foul balls.

Manager Richards said Weyman Kerksieck would open against the Vols tonight. The Cracker pitching staff was worked overtime in the Memphis series.

Events of last night were interesting. Here's how the game went—

The Chicks took the lead on a gift run in the second inning.

DIPSY DOODLER—This is Lamar Davis, ace Georgia sophomore wingback, who can really carry the mail. He is one of the fastest men in the south and an excellent broken field runner. He ran back five punts for touchdowns in three freshman games last fall. Lamar has been out with an injured ankle for a week but he returned to practice yesterday. He is expected to be ready for the Bulldogs' opening game against Oglethorpe next week at Ponce de Leon park.

Davis Returns as Georgia Goes Behind Closed Gates

Butts Sorely Disappointed With Defensive Work of Bulldogs in Dismal, Three-Hour Practice.

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 16.—Georgia's football practice for the next two weeks will be behind closed gates.

Coach Wallace Butts announced this afternoon he would institute secret drills for the first time this season, beginning tomorrow.

"We've got some things to do down here that can be accomplished quicker and with better results without the public," Coach Butts said. All workouts to date have been open to the public "so our friends can learn each boy by sight," as Butts put it.

Monday's workout was dismal. Lasting more than three hours, the long practice session was devoted to the freshman in a long pass defense drill and the Red Devils on running plays.

Tackling was terrible, especially by the backs. They were not sure and when they got in position they didn't put their shoulder into the runner. Arm tackling was the order of the day.

Lamar Davis, brilliant sophomore wingback, was in full uniform this afternoon for the first time in ten days, but he did not get into the rough work. The lanky Brunswick speedster and Winfred Goodman, who has a slightly pulled muscle in his leg, jogged around the field for a couple of hours and went in for the training room attention. Davis probably will be held out of rough

PRINCE ALBERT
THE NATIONAL JOY SMOKE

"SCORES EVERY TIME FOR MILD, RICH-TASTING ROLL-YOUR-OWN SMOKES!"

Carl Rinker and Tracy Powell talk Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco

Rollin' along with P. A. I. Juanita Sikes knows what the boys are talking about—she, too, has a nose for good tobacco—the kind the boys are smoking and praising. "Prince Albert's goodness," says Carl Rinker (right), "comes through without harshness. It's prime, fully aged tobacco." "Yes, sir, there's no other tobacco like Prince Albert," adds Tracy Powell (center). "It's the National Joy Smoke!" (So say pipe-smokers, too!)

In recent laboratory "smoking bowl" tests, Prince Albert burned 86 DEGREES COOLER than the average of the 30 other of the largest-selling brands tested...coolest of all!

Witness Tells Of Slaying by Murder Gang

Harrison is a neat triple-threat and Charlie Tate is an excellent fullback. They happen to be standouts.

The direction of the team will rest with Archie Bagwell, Paul Eller and Bill Latsko. Hubie Houston is a scat quarterback, weighing less than 150. He can go. Houston probably will be used in spots.

Of course, Florida has another fullback who may eclipse Tate. That's Bud Walton, a veteran. He has been a valued performer for the 'Gators since his sophomore year.

Florida's right halfbacks are accomplished. They are Bill Cowan and Leo Cahill. Cowan began his high school football as a guard, but was promptly shifted to the backfield. Cahill last year caught the pass which beat a strong Boston College eleven.

The left halfbacks, besides Harrison, are Pat Reen, Tom Scott and Jack Jones. Reen never played a game in high school, but he has come forward as a 'Gator. Scott is an elusive runner. Jones is a sophomore.

Back-Breaking Schedule

The 'Gators open with Mississippi State. They could hardly have arranged a tougher one if they had had the whole country to choose from. There are, perhaps, three games that aren't killer-dillers.

Here is the schedule:

- Sept. 28—Mississippi State at Gainesville (night).
- Oct. 5—Tampa at Tampa (night).
- Oct. 12—Villanova at Philadelphia (night).
- Oct. 19—Maryland at Gainesville.
- Oct. 26—Tennessee at Knoxville.
- Nov. 2—Open.
- Nov. 9—Georgia at Jacksonville.
- Nov. 16—Miami at Miami, Fla. (night).
- Nov. 23—Georgia Tech at Atlanta.
- Nov. 30—Auburn at Gainesville.
- Dec. 7—U. of Texas at Gainesville.

As the schedule shows, the 'Gators will rest up for Georgia after playing Tennessee. Outside of the Tampa game, that's really the only rest spot on the card. The Miami Hurricane is not in the big leagues, but annually the team is tougher than somewhat.

J. Dillingham, 10-Game Card

Dixsteel Ace, Is Announced Goes to Phils For Decatur

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

They will soon be calling him Sweet Pickle. Pickle is going to a sour ball club, but he is going to make them a "sweet" ball player.

At least that is what those who have seen him play are saying about James (Pickle) Dillingham, Dixsteel second baseman, who leaves this morning to play the remainder of the season with Doc Prothro's Phillies.

It was well known about town that major league scouts making a stop-gap of Atlanta were whispering, "What do you think of this Dillingham?" into the ears of baseball wise locals all season.

And from the answers he got, John Ogden, Phillie business manager, decided the boy must have plenty on the ball and signed him this week.

Manager C. L. McGowan and all the Dixsteel players and those who have played against him, will tell you John Ogden has hired a good ball player. Bill Perrin, ex-Southern League pitcher for New Orleans, thinks Pickle will make the grade next year.

Pickle hit over 400 this year for Dixsteel. He is a good fielder, has a fine throwing arm, hits for distance, and hits best with men on the sacks.

Joe Martin's Eleven To Be Stronger Despite Heavy Losses.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Those briny drops falling from Smoky Joe Martin's face are not tears but perspiration. Although Joe has only eight letter men back around which to build his Decatur High eleven this year he is letting the others do the weeping for him. "Let me lose a lot of 'em," "but just between us we are about 50 per cent better than last year."

Peering at his team's tough, 10-game schedule, including seven home games, Joe further allows, "They may have to be better to get through this schedule. We only won three and lost six last year, you know. Bill Badgett (250-pound line coach who once was a whale of a tackle at Georgia) and I have a lot of work to do to get ready for our opening game here with Fulton High Friday night. This team is plenty green, but I'm kinda hopin' to come up with a good one before the season ends."

HEAVIER TEAM.

"Last year we had a light outfit. This one should be about 10 pounds heavier. We lost a lot of about 45 players who reported for practice about 25 of them look pretty fair. Replacing Ed Pierce, the best passer in the city, will be a tough job, but Frank Broyles can run, kick and pass fairly well, and I have a new youngster, Harold Stillwell, who only weighs around 150 pounds, who can pass and run well with the ball. He is plenty green, but he can run like a superstitious negro in a graveyard at midnight. He may be all right."

Joe likes the big improvement shown by all his lettermen. Broyles and the Brown brothers, Dewey and Harlan, all backs, are showing up well. Great strides have been made by veteran guards Bo Pierce and Joe Phelps, and Ryan Jackson, who is a tackle, a guard, is much better. Eugene Golding, who was a very good end last year, has gained weight and seems set for a fine year.

BATTLE AT CENTER.

Phillips Shackelford, though improved over last year, is having to battle with Mitchell Scruggins for the first-string center post. The latter was a scrub last year, but is going great guns in practice now.

James Pardee and J. B. Smith are vying for a first-string quarterback berth, and Clark Laseter and Robert Sistrunk are scrapping for the other end berth. At the present Dan Kerner and George Olsen rate first-string tackle spots. But they all will have to hustle to stay on the first-string, opines drawing Joe. "There are some other good men around." The best of these are H. A. Thornton, a half back; Lamar Ferrell, an end; and Linemen Allan Carroll, Pat Murphy, Jimmy Fisher and Lawton Gilbert.

Decatur High schedule: Sept. 20—Fulton High at Decatur. Sept. 27—Russell High at Decatur. Oct. 4—Toccoa at Decatur. Oct. 11—Athens High at Decatur. Oct. 18—North Fulton at North Fulton. Oct. 25—Gainesville at Decatur. Nov. 1—Griffin at Decatur. Nov. 8—West Fulton at West Fulton. Nov. 15—Marietta at Marietta (morning game).

Witness Tells Of Slaying by Murder Gang

Declares Victim Lured Into Home and Then Put to Death.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(UP)—Abe (Kid Twist) Reles today told about one of his 10 or a dozen murders, the one in which Harry (Pittsburgh Phil) Strauss, an executive of Murder, Inc., is charged with "mugging," or, as we say, strangling, Irving (Pugy) Feinstein, a dishonest gangster.

According to Reles, who was a potent witness in the conviction of two others of the corporation, Harry (Happy) Malone and Frank (The Dasher) Abbandando, Feinstein was slain on contract for a gang he had offended with the double cross.

Reles came upon Strauss, who contends he is crazy and shouldn't be on trial, shooting craps in a vacant lot, he said, and informed of the order "to make" some guy name Pugy.

A year ago Labor Day, Reles continued, Pugy was invited to the Reles home for diversions. It was a stag affair and Reles asked his wife and a woman guest to leave. They did, but Reles' mother-in-law, more on the independent side, refused to budge. She stayed upstairs in her room and told her son-in-law where he could find the rope and ice pick.

Strauss arrived soon afterward with Anthony (Duke) Maffettore and Martin (Bugsy) Goldstein, arm-in-arm with the unlucky Pugy. Reles continued. They didn't waste any time.

"Harry tried to mug Pugy but he didn't get him right and Duke pushed him on the couch," Kid Twist related. Harry and Duke were inconvenienced by the noise Pugy made, he went on, so he turned up the radio louder. They finally trusted up Pugy "until he looked like a ball about this size."

Maffettore and Goldstein took the body out to burn it in an empty lot. After this was done Strauss and Goldstein had a stiff supper, about the way the murder went.

"Strauss told Bugsy that he was useless," Reles testified, "and Goldstein told Strauss that he couldn't even mug a guy right."

Light Vote Seen In Runover Races

A predicted extra light vote in tomorrow's runover primary last night gave rise to considerable conjecture as to whether or not active minorities may not be able to ease their candidates into office for the eight city positions before the people.

A ponder, tax collector, four councilmen and two members of the board of education are to be nominated.

All liquor stores in the city will be closed for the election but those outside the city limits will remain open.

Agnes Scott To Begin Fall Term Tomorrow

Agnes Scott's fall term will be officially opened with a special chapel program tomorrow morning at 10 a. m. Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the college, will deliver the principal address of the morning on the subject, "Maintaining the Quality of Education."

The Rev. D. P. McGeachy, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Decatur, will lead the devotional and a welcome on behalf of the board of trustees will be extended by George Winship, chairman of the board.

Spain's Envoy Arrives For Parley With Hitler

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The arrival today of General Serrano Suner, brother-in-law of Spain's Generalissimo Franco, for conferences with Adolf Hitler and Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was seen as indicating that National Spain is on the eve of some special understanding with the Rome-Berlin axis.

Serrano Suner told interviewers that Spain's present status is one of "non-belligerence," but that she "has a mission in Europe's new order, with consideration for natural rights arising from our traditional and geographical situation."

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION

By MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

Brooke Starts Work for Mrs. Kinsbury As Her Secretary-Companion

SYNOPSIS. Brooke Carter, her mother dead, her father remarried, quits as secretary to a wealthy Mrs. Kinsbury, whom she had met while the old lady was boarding with Rod Westover's mother, Grace, in the New Hampshire town. Really she has come to New York to be near Rod, to whom she has been engaged for four years and who has been very successful in his work for Barney Glass since he finished college three years ago. Business has kept Rod so busy that she has not seen him for three months; and she is very happy when he meets her at her small hotel and takes her to dinner. She is surprised when he tells her he has moved from the cluttered apartment he shared with drawing Jim Bartlett, his college roommate, who now is an accountant. Rod explains that, while Jim probably thinks he has become a snob, his advance in the business world calls for better living quarters. As they dance, little Rod Westover and tall handsome Julian Carlton enter the restaurant. Carlton, Rod says, is a brilliant corporation lawyer. She will meet them both two days later at a cocktail party. Brooke is giving. Rod tells her. As Rod says he must work the next evening, she and Rod go to the next evening. She meets Irene Davies, a wealthy divorced woman many years older than Rod. Jim says Rod still loves Brooke, but Mrs. Davies is much interested in Rod, and Brooke should be on her guard. She meets Irene at a cocktail party. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT VII

Ellen, gray, middle-aged, timid but capable, wearing a blue-gray uniform, admitted her cordially into a livingroom much longer than it was wide. It was furnished in a nondescript manner, but was comfortable. The windows were open (Brooke remembered Mrs. Kinsbury's passion for fresh air, one fortunately that she shared), and the bright chintz draperies were blowing. Off the livingroom she saw a small diningroom with a mahogany table which could not adequately seat more than four, and four thin-legged mahogany chairs.

Ellen led the way to a bedroom. "This is your room. I hope you are going to like it with us. Is there anything I can get for you? Mrs. Kinsbury isn't awake yet."

Brooke smiled. "No, there's nothing, thank you. But will you tell Mrs. Kinsbury that I am here when she awakes? I think I am going to be very comfortable." The motherliness of the spinster Ellen cheered her.

When Ellen left the high-ceilinged square room, Brooke pulled off her brown hat, slipped out of the brown coat, tightened the belt of her slim green jersey frock and set about unpacking. Her hands lingered on a large photograph of Rod which she placed on the maple table beside the narrow maple bed. Together for the whole of yesterday, they had been as if they were lovers alone in the world, and in his last kiss he had given himself to her.

Brooke sat down in the faded cretonne-covered chair beside the bed and considered seriously what she had failed to consider at all—the task of being Mrs. Kinsbury's secretary and companion. The self-lecture began and ended with a series of doubts. But it was impossible to do more than scratch the surface of the personality and character of the old lady during a few weeks several summers ago.

A light tap at her door and Brooke crossed the room and opened it. "She'll see you," Ellen said. Mrs. Kinsbury's room, large, airy, sunny, was furnished with massive mahogany pieces. Mrs. Kinsbury, a pink woolen bed jacket half concealing the high-necked, long-sleeved old-fashion-ioned nightgown, sat upright in the bed, her breakfast tray on her lap. A green down comfort concealed her spare frame. Her color was good, her rather abundant white hair was piled high and held fast by a knot, gold-rimmed spectacles rested on an aquiline nose, and her thin lips were drawn to a grim straight line. Brooke thought, "Why, she's just like any other New England housewife." Surprising, that, after so many years of luxury and travel. It occurred to the girl too, and for the first time, that perhaps Mrs. Kinsbury had formed a habit for change which she could not break.

"Good morning, Brooke," the old lady said stiffly, looking her up and down.

"Good morning, Mrs. Kinsbury." She did not know where to begin.

"If you'll sit down," she said with a bored look as if this were something which must be borne. Brooke sat down. The old lady surveyed coolly and said, "I'm always at my best in the morning. So we'll attend to my correspondence and business at this hour. If you'll hand me the portfolio from the dresser . . . You'll find note paper and a pencil on the desk."

At the end of two hours Brooke not only knew more about Mrs. Kinsbury's business but more about the lady herself. These details of her life were attended to not as a pleasure but as a duty, accompanied by many sighs. The people to whom she wrote were, Brooke guessed, women like herself, widowed, wealthy, alone and homeless, products of years of wandering. In the letters were many complaints of the climate and food. But several times Brooke saw a tired wistfulness in the old lady's eyes.

To a man in Baltimore, who obviously owed her money, she wrote a cryptic, demanding note, murmuring, "If only the people who owe me would pay me! I'm too soft. That's the trouble with me."

Brooke as yet could detect no softness, only a passion for duty and method. Her frugality and her belief that she was being duped was evident. The high cost of living disturbed her, and the cost of repairs to her car were beyond her comprehension. Brooke wondered if she were as wealthy as the imaginations of Chatham made her. She was frugal, too, with words, and her attitude toward Brooke was aloof, impersonal. And since Brooke was certain that Mrs. Kinsbury's habits were the same from New Hampshire to Cairo, she wondered what was behind her desire to spend the remainder of the winter in New York.

At last the old lady said, "There's a portable typewriter there in the closet. Take it to your room. And this afternoon I'm expecting my lawyer and I won't need you."

"Shall I get some books for you?" "Books?" She brightened a little. "Yes! And that's all. And tell Ellen I'd like some ice cream for my lunch. Chocolate. Giving Brooke a frozen smile of dismissal, she added again, "That's all."

During luncheon she did not appear and Ellen talked quietly as she served.

"Her husband had asthma," she said. "They were always looking for a place where he could breathe. It was hard on her."

When Ellen said, "I hope you'll stay," Brooke suspected that there had been other secretary-companions who had not. However, the knowledge of Mrs. Kinsbury's personality and character was important to her only in that she must serve them for a few months. Questions to Ellen concerning herself revealed that Ellen had raised two generations of ungrateful Boston Smiths, then had been cruelly "let out" five years ago and an advertisement led her to Mrs. Kinsbury. Smiling, Ellen said, "I'd always wanted to go to Europe."

After two days Brooke knew that the sight of beautiful things and places had obviously left no stamp upon Mrs. Kinsbury's practical mind. As she had driven through the country with her employee the previous day, Mrs. Kinsbury was not aware of the beauty of stark trees against a blue winter sky, but of the fact that the houses were in need of paint and that Francis, the swarthy little chauffeur who spoke five languages, was driving too fast. Upright she had sat, the collar of her seal coat buttoned high, an antiquated black hat on her white head. It was not to see that she went, Brooke thought, but just to be going. . . . After three days of self-discipline and service, Brooke welcomed Rod's coming with joy. Dressed in a new black suit and a white silk blouse, a year-old but still good, she joined Mrs. Kinsbury for dinner. For only in the evening did the old lady come to the small dining room.

"You're going out?" she asked. Brooke took her place and smiled between the tall brass candlesticks.

"Didn't Mrs. Westover tell you that I am going to marry her son?"

"Yes, yes, she did. I'd forgotten." Wistfulness in the gray eyes again, though her voice was sharp. "You're too young to get married."

"I'm twenty-one."

"Still a child. Nothing but a child."

"Would you like to meet Rod? He's coming at nine."

"Very well. I'll come out to meet him."

To look him over, Brooke thought.

For an hour she read a blood-curdling mystery story the old lady listening attentively. She liked a challenge to the sharpness of her mind, Brooke thought. For twice during the reading she was interrupted by, "Do you think he did it?" Brooke feigned both interest and ignorance.

Her heart stopped and started crazily when she returned to the living room and Rod arose to greet her.

"Darling . . ."

He looked amused. She said, "Wait." She hurried to Mrs. Kinsbury's room and followed her back into the living room.

Mrs. Kinsbury was aloof and formal and after a short time returned to her room.

Outside in the cold night air Brooke took Rod's arm, feeling that she was out of bondage.

In a quiet restaurant she recalled the happenings of the past three days, for him, saying, "She isn't so terrible, really. Just inhibited. She gives nothing out. I like to think of old people being mellow and wise and tolerant. Ellen, her maid is. She was telling me how beautiful Italy is."

Loving the sight of his dear dark head and eyes, wanting his voice more than the sound of her own, she said, "Let's not talk it any more."

She was too happy to realize that it was a patronizing pat he gave her hand.

"You should have friends here, Brooke."

"I could call Mrs. Davies."

She sensed his uneasiness at once. "You could—but I don't think I'd advise it. She's a good bit older than you . . ."

What Do You Know About AVIATION?

The Constitution offers its young readers an opportunity to learn the fundamentals of aviation . . . to take "ground school" courses in aeronautics prepared by famous experts . . . to build and fly model planes in big meetings to join America's greatest aviation youth movement, The Constitution Air Cadets.

All young people, male or female, between the ages of 10 and 21 may become members and receive the full benefits of this great aviation youth movement. Such famous fliers as Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, Colonel Roscoe Turner, Major Jimmy Doolittle, Colonel Jimmy Hatten and many other notables of the air, approve and endorse The Constitution Air Cadets. And this great youth program is officially sanctioned by the National Aeronautics Association. Use the application below to join this movement and learn the groundwork of aviation.

WE, THE PEOPLE—The dramatic story of how baseball's famed Dizzy Dean lost his pitching power and was removed from his powerful post with the Chicago Cubs to a mound job with the Tulsa, Okla., minor league team and then worked his way back to the major league again will be told by the great "Diz" himself when he joins Gabriel Heatter's guests on "We, the People," over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight.

Paula Richards, who went through Oriental war zones to seek a fortune and found imprisonment instead; Jimmy Yancey, originator of "boogie woogie" music; Jack and Helen Sylvestra, who were jobless one week and starting on Broadway the next week; and Alex Millbrooks, who held two companions, one dead and the other badly injured, atop a boxcar for 85 miles will be heard in addition to Dizzy Dean.

DRAMA—"Reno-vated," a sparkling comedy romance, will be presented by the "First Nighter" in the "Little Theater off Times Square" over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne, as a young movie star couple, gave involved in plenty of excitement when the faithful and indispensable servants start for Reno after 20 years of married life, Julie Trent, played by Miss Luddy, insists that her maid complete her new hair-do, even though it means going to Reno for the coiffure. This immediate starts a rumor that Julie is divorcing Gordon Trent, played by Les Tremayne, Gordon refuses to give up his valet, Henry, after the servants are divorced, and more trouble ensues. But Henry has an opportunity to win back his wife by a heroic act and the movie couple become reconciled.

INFORMATION—Otto Tolischus, noted foreign correspondent and Pulitzer Prize winner, and Oscar Levant, pianist, turned actor, will be the guest stars on "Information Please" when the quiz program goes on the air over WAGA at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Tolischus, who for seven years turned in authoritative dispatches from Berlin to the New York Times, has had wide experience as a political reporter. He did newspaper work in both Europe and America during the 1920s, and when the Nazis came into power in Germany, he returned to Berlin as the Times correspondent. Helping Tolischus to satisfy Clifton Fadiman's curiosity on the program will be Franklin P. Adams and John Kieran, the show's quiz-hardened regulars, and Oscar Levant, the piano player.

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—The combined influences of the day suggest finishing things already started, for the day is not especially auspicious for the beginning of new affairs. The influences operating tend to a scattering of funds, and a lack of concentration, so you may not be thoroughly versed in all the intricacies of any new undertakings. Financial affairs and real estate dealings are not especially favorable.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—Before 9 a. m. favors signing contracts, attending to matters of a written nature and attempting to settle matters that are in dispute. After 9:45 a. m. favors asking favors, especially if the favors are to come from someone in authority.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—Before 6:25 a. m. and from 6:35 p. m. through 9 p. m. may be considered the best part of the day. During these hours favors domestic relationships, matters of art and beauty. After 9 p. m. does not especially favor important deals or beginning of affairs that you desire to work out smoothly.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—Previous to 8:17 a. m. the influences may incline you to jump into things you know nothing of, therefore be discreet in all that you do. From 8:17 a. m. throughout the remainder of the day and evening, let nothing hold you down. Encourage all matters that look promising.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—The entire day and evening favors dealings with those who are staid in manner. An excellent day for consummating real estate deals.

August 23rd and September 23rd (VIRGO)—More will be accomplished by conducting your business, personal and professional affairs along conservative lines previous to 3:58 p. m. After 3:58 p. m. favors making personal contacts to seek favors, for dealing with women and in works that pertain to adornment.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—The entire day and until 10:28 p. m. favors dealings in land, contacting older people and for new beginnings.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—The entire day favors new beginnings. An auspicious day to start a journey, communicate with others and make changes. Be careful of what you sign after 9:18 p. m.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—The entire day and evening favors contacts, whatever you have started. The period previous to 6:24 p. m. does not especially favor making contacts or promoting friendship with important people. The entire day and evening favors financial matters and legal affairs.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—The period previous to 1:38 p. m. favors seeking favors and dealings with people in authority and professional achievement. After 1:38 p. m. and continuing throughout the evening favors sticking to affairs already started.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—The entire day and evening favors work that requires sound judgment and dealings with conservative people. The best aspects operate after 3:15 p. m.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—The entire day and evening favors dealings with practical and worldly affairs, and does not especially favor the emotional or social side of life.
